BIG PROBLEM INVOLVED IN CANNON CASE

Power of Senate and Rights of Individual May Be Defined as Result

HOLD DIFFERENT VIEWS

Bishop Not Running for Office, and Not Under Jurisdiction of Law

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright 1930 by Post Pub. Co.
Washington—(CPA)—A bigger issue than politics or prohibition is involved in the fight between Bishop Cannon and the senate lobby committee.

Just where does the power of a senate committee begin and end? Does every witness have to answer every question asked? And if he refuses, does he face contempt proceedings? These questions projected on a highly controversial background of politics, have grown out of the refusal of Bishop Cannon to answer questions propounded to him by Senator Walsh of Montana. His contention is that as a volunteer witness he is not compelled to answer, but that if he is formally subpoenaed he would give the necessary information.

The lobby investigation started originally as a means of finding out what influences were at work to affect legislation and the tariff. It was used to draw into its net the chairman of the Democratic national committee and a long list of people who have been active in representing various causes and movements in Washington. Just what legislation the lobby committee was seeking to recommend is not clear. Usually the powers of investigation are given in order to get the facts or opinions with respect to pending bills. The lobby committee, however, primarily has depended on the power of exposure.

QUESTION AT ISSUE

The fact that Bishop Cannon did not account in detail for his activities and expenditures in his anti-Smith campaign in Virginia is the general charge leveled against him, but whether this is the function of the lobby committee or whether indeed there is any legislative power to compel persons who are not officials of the government to testify.

DIES OF OVERWORK IN ERECTION OF STILL

Chicago—(AP)—John Romansky's death early today was ascribed to heart disease brought on by over-erection in the erection of a still and not by fright during a robbery as at first reported.

Police questioned a neighbor, Charles Troy, who admitted the hoax in trying to conceal his part in the erection of a still with Romansky. He was held for the inquest. Troy earlier told police Romansky died after being robbed of his automobile by five men.

"When Swallows Fly"

... One swallow does not a summer make ... but up in this neck of the woods the saying is that, "When you get more than one swallow on the job the result is 'A few months' relief from good sleighing."

And that, by the way, ushers in the home hunting period. We're kind of balanced on the fence so we are going to toss a few slices of advice on both sides of it. To the chap who wants to rent we say, "watch the Classified rentals daily." To the landlords we are going to tip you off by referring to the late case of Mrs. J. R. Noel, 312 N. State St. She needed occupants for a set of three furnished housekeeping rooms. She called us. John P. Public with a Classified ad ... eight of the public dashed into action ... one was the lucky one and at last reports the other 7 were still reading the Classifieds for their chance.

Yours truly,

May Hop Tonight

CHARLES KINGSFORD-SMITH

4 Ready To Start Ocean Hop Tonight

BULLETIN
London—(AP)—The Associated Press tonight was informed in a message from Curragh Camp, Ireland, that Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith had definitely decided not to start on his trans-Atlantic flight attempt tomorrow (Sunday) morning.

Dublin—(AP)—Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith hopes to take off on his attempted trans-Atlantic flight Sunday morning at 2 o'clock if weather reports at that hour are favorable, he announced today.

"All depends upon the weather," Captain Kingsford-Smith said in making known his purpose. "If there is a sporting chance of early reports showing prospects of improvement in the weather the start will be made. Waiting is bad for the nerves. My men share my view that a quick getaway is the thing."

"This is to be a do-or-die dash. Everything is perfect in the machine. We are anxious to be off."

All four members of the Australian aviator's crew were cheerful and optimistic. They refused to even contemplate the possibility of failure. The route will be straight across Ireland to Galway where farewell will be taken to the Irish coast. The "Southern Cross" is equipped with a strong radio and will flash frequent messages to the world on its progress.

Under Captain Kingsford-Smith's plans to take off tomorrow at 2 a. m. (8 p. m. Appleton time tonight) the "Southern Cross" should be far out upon its journey westward over the Atlantic ocean by daybreak. There has been but one westward flight that approximated success, that of the German craft "Bremen" in April, 1928, in whose flight in Irishman, Col. James C. Fitzmaurice of the Irish Free State was a distinguished figure. He flew as a pilot with Baron von Huenefeld and Captain Herman Koehl. They took off April 12, 1928 from the Baldonnel airfield.

Democratic Keynote Is Sounded By Racine Man

Milwaukee—(AP)—Fleeting for Democrats and other Wisconsin voters, "weary of conditions" to return to the party whose "foundations are as old as human history," Thomas M. Kearney, Racine, sounded the keynote of the state Democratic conference here today.

Otto A. LaBuddé, Milwaukee, opened the convention, shortly before noon with the statement that Democratic votes in the last campaign "must be considered the patriotic votes because they could be influenced by money." "I feel," he said, "that in this crisis of the nation and depression in Wisconsin the people can only turn to the Democratic party. Hoover and the Republican party have lost the confidence of the people."

Mr. Kearney was introduced after congressional district caucus nominated members of committees on resolutions, permanent organization, credentials and nominations. The committee functioned this afternoon, holding secret negotiations of...

START SEARCH FOR MISSING SHIOCTON MAN

William Hooker, 33, Left Home Wednesday and Hasn't Been Seen Since

A widespread search was started Saturday by Sheriff John Lappen for William Hooker, 33, who disappeared from his farm on route 2, Shiocton, early Wednesday morning and has not been seen since.

Hooker lived alone on his farm. His absence was noted when the animals attracted the attention of neighbors. He has eight cows and several horses. His brother-in-law, C. Wingate, lives on a farm about a mile away.

The man was last seen early Wednesday morning when he cashed a $2 check at Shiocton. He left in an old Ford roadster, bearing the Illinois license number B-6688. It is possible that Hooker may be suffering from mental derangement, it is believed.

Hooker is described as being about five feet, four inches tall and weighing 185 pounds. He has dark brown hair, florid complexion, is of slender build with a crooked nose and large ears. He is stoop-shouldered. When he disappeared he wore a dark brown suit.

Descriptions of the missing man have been supplied by Sheriff to the police departments of all nearby cities and also the sheriff departments of nearby counties.

EINSTEIN ANNOUNCES NEW THEORY ON SPACE

New York—(AP)—Einstein's announcement in London that "space is empty" is another break into a new field of investigation, one not incomprehensible as it sounds. He has found another method of measuring space of a particular kind, the tangible space in which men live, which is not empty but is known to be filled with gravitation, light, electrical forces, possibly with "ether" and perhaps other unknowns. Einstein's figures have shown for some time that space having these properties may be limited in extent.

His theories do not say what is outside the kind of light-electricity-filled space that telescopes can see and human brain figure mathematically. His theories do not deny the common sense of a particular kind, which thinks of space as going on forever. They simply postulate that the kind of space visible either to the eye or imagination is probably not only limited but likely in the end to prove different from what is expected.

WOMEN'S CLUBS KEEP FAITH IN PROHIBITION

Denver—(AP)—By an overwhelming vote the twentieth biennial convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs today adopted a resolution reaffirming the organization's faith in prohibition after an unsuccessful attempt had been made to delete a reference to "sinister influences" opposed to prohibition.

A standing vote on the question of adopting the resolution showed eleven in favor of striking out the word "sinister," five of the eleven being from Texas.

Spontaneous Response Insures Band Members Journey To Washington

Over the top!

In less than 24 hours after the Appleton Post-Crescent had announced a public subscription drive to raise $475 for Appleton high school band to insure the band's trip to Washington D. C. next week, the goal was reached.

A total of $200 was subscribed by Friday noon before public announcement of the drive was made, and after the paper appeared on the streets Friday afternoon there began to arrive at the Post-Crescent office voluntary subscriptions in such amounts that its fulfillment was practically assured by Friday night. The contributions continued to arrive Saturday morning and at noon it had reached $510.

The enthusiasm with which the drive was received is evidence that the private persons and business houses in Appleton have full knowledge of the immense amount of publicity which the city and county is receiving through the rural school commencement trip to Washington and also of the unexcelled educational value of the trip to the students. It was pointed out by A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools.

Putting the drive over the top insures the trip to Washington for each of the 60 members of the band. The cost per individual is $25. This includes transportation, meals, hotels and meals while in Washington and on the return trip. Each member of the band has pledged himself to raise $15 and the balance is being provided by selling tickets to a movie and also through the subscription campaign.

Contributions to the drive, if there are any other persons desiring to make them, will continue to be accepted by the Post-Crescent. They will be turned over to the general fund of Washington fund. This fund is being used by A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools, to send those rural school graduates on a trip who could not personally afford to purchase a ticket at $25.

Already many persons have offered to send a boy or girl on the trip.

THREE KIDNAPED IN INDIA ARE RELEASED

Two Army Officers and Woman Freed by Insurgent Border Tribesmen

London—(AP)—A Bombay dispatch to the Daily Herald today said that Chandra, son of one of those arrested after the recent raid against the police arsenal at Chittagong, had turned state's evidence and identified eight of the prisoners as having participated in the raid. Thirty other prisoners consequently were released.

Simla, India—(AP)—Major E. L. Farley, Captain J. C. Freer and Mrs. Freer, who were kidnapped Wednesday by insurgent frontier tribesmen near Chaman on the Quettachaman border, were returned safely today to Chaman.

They were held for two days or more by the Achakzai raiders who took them and carried across the frontier into Afghanistan, after their cars, driven by Indians, had been stopped by a barricade of rocks placed across the road.

The engineer of a train passing close by saw the empty cars and stopped to investigate. Divining what had happened he rushed with the news to Chaman, from where troops were sent, but too late to intercept the raiders before they crossed the border six miles distant.

Yesterday Hakim Spin Balak, one of the local chiefs, after fruitless preliminary negotiations, went himself to seek release of the three captives, who were said to have been treated considerably. He was accompanied by a body of Afghan troops in six motor trucks.

Major Farley is an officer of the Royal Engineers while Captain Freer is of the Twelfth Secunderabad infantry brigade.

POLICE ACT TO HALT FURTHER GANG MURDERS

4 MINERS DIE, 6 ARE INJURED IN COLORADO

Part of Lower Tunnel of Molybdenum Mine Collapses During Blast

Leadville, Colo.—(AP)—Four men were killed and six injured early today in the collapse of part of the lower tunnel of the Climax molybdenum mine, 12 miles northeast of Leadville.

There were ten men in the mine at the time of the cave-in. James Corbett, acting coroner of Leadville, telephoned here from the mine that the rescue crews had reached all of the bodies. One of the injured men, Archie Wilson, suffered fracture of several ribs and his condition is critical.

The cave-in occurred 2,200 feet under the top of Mount Massive, in a hard rock of the Leadville district. It occurred in the lowest tunnel of the mine, which extends under other workings. The ground at this point is loose and wet. Several cave-ins have occurred there in recent weeks. The Climax mine is a subsidiary of the American Metals company.

James Murray, district mine inspector, went to the scene of the accident. The climax is the largest molybdenum mine in the United States. It is located at an altitude of 12,000 feet and employs 200 men in the mine and milling properties.

Superintendent W. J. Coulter said the men were setting off blasts of dynamite when the collapse occurred. It had not been determined how far back in the workings the miners were at the time of the cave-in.

FLOOD OF POISON LIQUOR KILLS 24 IN NEW YORK CITY

New York—(AP)—A warning that a flood of poison liquor is sweeping this city was issued today by Dr. Charles Morris, chief medical examiner, after autopsies had determined that alcohol poisoning had caused the death of nine men in the last two days. He said there had been 24 deaths from poison alcohol in the city since May 10.

"This," he said, "is an indication that a flood of poison liquor is sweeping the city. It seems to me that prohibition agents should center their efforts at this time to seeking the sources of supply of this main successive show."

Seven of those who died lived in the congested section of the lower east side.

Back in Rumania

PRINCE CAROL

Reports In Paris Give Carol Crown

Paris—(AP)—Unofficial reports were received in Paris today that former Crown Prince Carol has been proclaimed king of Rumania by the Rumanian assembly.

(Address from Bucharest said that Carol tonight or to-morrow a. m., C. S. T.) Reports were received sympathetically in semi-official circles where it was said that even if he had not already been proclaimed, the ceremony would not be long delayed.

Private advice reaching Paris from Bucharest indicated that the liberal party, which has been opposed to him, had decided to accept Carol as king after their risk civil war.

It is understood that the youthful King Michael will be placed in a nursery and that Carol would be given an opportunity to show whether he intends to be a good king having left his indications behind him.

Carol through his years of exile in France is known to have acquired a pronounced friendship for the French and his advent to the throne of Rumania is regarded with satisfaction by governmental circles here. At the same time official circles state they were not in imminent danger of being about Carol's return, deeming it an exclusively internal Rumanian matter.

NO CONFIRMATION

Official Rumanian circles later said it had no confirmation of the report that Carol already had been proclaimed king. A spokesman said he believed the report was premature—because there had not been sufficient time to assemble parliament and to secure the abrogation of the decrees instituting the regency. However he added that the proclamation of Carol as king seemed entirely probable later.

Both Rumanians and French were silent today when asked exactly how and when Carol went by airplane from Paris to Bucharest.

One newspaper suggested that the Captain Popa, Rumanian officer, known to have left Le Bourget airfield yesterday by plane, was Carol in disguise.

No cancellation has thus far been announced of Princess Helen's forthcoming departure on June 11 for Castle Kronberg, near Frankfurt, where she is to attend the celebration of the sixtieth birthday of former Queen Sophie of Greece.

It is expected that Dowager Queen Marie will return to Bucharest by June 14.

One of the first changes that took place on the heels of Carol's return to Bucharest was the appointment of former War Minister Tschigolski as commander of the Bucharest garrison.

His return was the result of negotiations with friends and emissaries of the peasant party government covering months. When recently he promised to leave Mme. Lupescu, the liberal oppositionist, awake anew to his dislike of him and fought bitterly to prevent his return.

ADVANCES TO BELGIAN
It was said this opposition extended as far as advances to Prince Charles, second Belgian prince, to ask him to take the throne left vacant in 1927 by King Ferdinand's death, and occupied now by 8-year-old Michael. Carol, hearing of the situation, thought it better to risk all while it was not too late and decided upon his surprising and dramatic return.

Carol left Munich for Bucharest yesterday morning, first wiring Col.onel Precup of his departure. At Cluj, reports said, several military planes hopped off to receive the prince who was forced to land at Arad at 5 o'clock p. m. for refueling. Arriving at Cluj at 6 o'clock p. m., Carol donned a general's uniform and hopped off for Bucharest where he landed at 10 o'clock p. m., being met by officers and his brother, Prince Nicholas. He then proceeded to Corbuzari palace.

PRINCE BACK TO WIN POWER IN BUCHAREST

Rumanian People Welcome Carol's Arrival With Much Enthusiasm

CABINET IN MEETING

Errant Prince Expected to Replace Nicholas on Regency Council

BULLETIN

Bucharest, Rumania—(AP)—The proclamation of former Crown Prince Carol as king of Rumania today was demanded by a majority of deputies in parliament close upon the heels of Carol's dramatic return to Bucharest by airplane from his exile in France.

Bucharest, Rumania—(AP)—Dashing Prince Carol, whose ancestors have shaped this country's policies for ten years, returned to Bucharest by airplane last night after five years of exile. Today he was the central figure in a situation which may portend sensational developments in Rumania.

The left behind him a Paris life and hanged companion of several years, Prince Michael, Lupescu, father of whom in 1925, he signed away his rights to the throne and established the regency which had two years later to crowning of his infant son, Michael, in his stead.

He came back home after in the uniform of a Rumanian general, although during the years even him by parliament after his return from the French, Carol, ex-claimant, friends met him at Corbuzari airfield and went with a lion to the royal palace. He first met his brother, Nicholas, whom he is expected to replace on the regency council.

Later he was received by the minister of interior and Premier J. M. Manda, who immediately convened an all night session of the cabinet to determine what place the 36-year-old prince-father could take in the government under the Rumanian constitution.

This cabinet met again early this morning, and adjourned so that M. Manda could attend a meeting of the regency council. Shortly afterward the premier announced that he would await a royal proclamation of Carol's return and then would resign. It was believed he would be asked to form a new government of concentration of all the parties.

PEOPLE ENTHUSIASTIC

The populace and the army received word of the errant prince's arrival with enthusiasm. The news spread rapidly, but it was not until this morning that the government issued an official communique stating simply that the father of the king was in Bucharest and that the cabinet had met to consider the situation. The nation was quiet.

It was believed here that Queen Marie, his mother, while cognizant of his intention to return, left here yesterday for Oberammergau, ostensibly to see the Passion Play, knew nothing of his daring coup. She was supposed generally to have planned meeting her oldest son somewhere in Germany and talking the situation over with him.

Prince Nicholas will leave Bucharest June 15 on a long European trip, and Princess Helen, mother of Michael and divorced wife of Carol, is expected not to remain. It was expected here that in some manner a way would be found for Carol to replace Nicholas as the royal representative on the regency council. There was said to be no immediate desire on his part or that of his partisans to raise him to the throne, at least immediately.

His return was the result of negotiations with friends and emissaries of the peasant party government covering months. When recently he promised to leave Mme. Lupescu, the liberal oppositionist, awake anew to his dislike of him and fought bitterly to prevent his return.

ADVANCES TO BELGIAN

Secret Treaty Documents Withheld From Senate

DATA WOULD BE HARMFUL TO U. S., VIEW

"No Concealed Understandings" Involved in Pact, Stimson Insists

Washington—(AP)—The administration will not comply with Senator Johnson's request that all documents relating to the London naval treaty be delivered to the senate foreign relations committee.

To produce these papers would, in the opinion of President Hoover, be contrary to the public interest and materially impair the possibility of future successful negotiations between this government and other nations.

Making this known, Secretary Stimson said "no concealed understandings" were involved in the treaty and no commitments whatever had been entered into except as they appear in the language of the pact itself.

He described as "nonsense" any implication "these confidential papers are being kept confidential in order to cover up some secret understanding or some mistake or indiscretion of the American delegates."

Senator Johnson, who is vigorously opposing the ratification of the arms limitation agreement, had asked the state department through Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee, for "all letters, papers, documents, telegrams, dispatches and communications of every sort leading up to or relating to the London conference and London treaty."

Stimson delivered his reply to Borah in person late yesterday and submitted as well a "confidential memorandum" which he said would answer so far as possible the questions asked by Johnson.

In his letter of refusal, the state department head went back to the very beginning of the republic to cite precedent for declining to produce the documents. From a message sent to the house of representatives by George Washington, in response to a request similar to that of Johnson, he quoted as follows:

"The nature of foreign negotiations requires caution and their success must often depend on secrecy; and even when brought to a conclusion a full disclosure of all the measures, demands or eventual concessions which may have been proposed or contemplated would be extremely impolitic; for this might have a pernicious influence on future negotiations or produce immediate inconveniences, perhaps dangerous and mischievous, in relation to other powers."

Pending a study of the communication, Johnson would not comment. Borah, too, was silent on the attitude of the administration, but announced he would begin on Monday a series of daily committee meetings, which would continue until a vote on the treaty had been taken.

TRY TO FORCE JEWS TO OBSERVE SABBATH

Jerusalem—(AP)—Forceful observance of the Sabbath by Jews in the Holy Land is being urged by the Jewish National Fund.

"Shomeri Shabbath," the "watchmen of the Sabbath," have been organized to remind all Jews of their religious duties. Every Friday night at sunset the watchmen in long caftans, with venerable beards, earlocks and wide-brimmed fur hats, stand on the roofs of Jerusalem's two largest hotels and blow ram's horns to warn the merchants to shut their shops.

Others patrol the streets calling at all Jewish shops to see that their doors are closed on time.

Many of the less orthodox Jews resent the intervention of the watchmen and openly disregard their religious edicts.

Orthodox Jews recently attempted to break up a large football match between a Jewish team and British military team on the Sabbath. Under leadership of a rabbi, they posted themselves on the road leading to the grounds and pelted passing cars with sand. They were arrested and heavily fined.

SINGLE ROSE ENOUGH FOR BRIDESMAID

Paris—(AP)—Bridgemaids profit by the tendency of Paris to put small posies and big hankies in the hands of feminine bridal attendants.

The ritual of long stemmed roses and sheets of ecru is far less favored here than a single beautiful blossom or a small bouquet of old-fashioned flowers.

Long gloves are partly responsible for the change of opinion on the flower question. Long skirts and fussier fashions account for the rest.

Many fashionable brides here give their bridesmaids yard square monogrammed chiffon handkerchiefs. The handkerchief matches the bridesmaid's dress.

HUNT FOR FORMER PITTSBURGH MAN IN DEATH MYSTERY

Was With Missing Man in Whose Burning Auto Body Was Found

Indianapolis—(AP)—A former Pittsburgh man was sought today by police investigating the burning of a man's body in the automobile of Harold Herbert Schroeder, Mobile, Ala., here a week ago.

C. C. Ridenhour, believed by police to have been with Schroeder a few days before the Mobile man reached Indianapolis for the 500-mile automobile race Memorial day, may hold the key to mystery of the fire and Schroeder's disappearance, detectives said.

Thomas Riley, investigator for an insurance company, revealed the search for Ridenhour on his return from Mobile early today. Riley said he obtained a photostatic copy of a check for $1,000 to which he said Schroeder had forged Ridenhour's name. Ridenhour, according to Riley, had been pressing for payment of this amount before Schroeder started from Mobile on a business tour north about May 20.

The detective said Ridenhour had red hair, was of Catholic religious faith, and formerly lived in Pittsburgh. Physicians who examined the charred body found in Schroeder's burned automobile the morning of May 31, said there was evidence the victim had red hair. Among articles found in the car were two rosaries, said by Schroeder's wife not to belong to him.

Two Pittsburgh street car tokens were found in the automobile.

Ridenhour, Riley said, knew Schroeder in Mobile, and has not been reported since a few days before the burning car was found.

Schroeder and two men, one of whom answered Ridenhour's description, Riley said, were reported seen at Frutdale, Ala., May 21 and the next day at Jackson, Miss.

Riley will go to Pittsburgh Sunday, he said, in an attempt to check Ridenhour's movements recently.

Two motorists who were the first to report the burning automobile last Saturday, said that near the scene, they picked up a hitch-hiker answering Schroeder's description, and brought him to Indianapolis. This led detectives to believe the body burned in the car was not that of Schroeder.

Ernest Schroeder of Evanston, Ill., a brother, said yesterday he was convinced Herbert Schroeder died in the fire.

Police found Gallagher's body propped against the bathroom door facing that of Mrs. Pope Gallagher, 30, which lay face down on the bedroom floor. His right hand held a revolver.

CANNON NOT EXCUSED BY QUORUM LACK

Walsh Contradicts Bishop's Claim That He Had Right to Leave

Washington—(AP)—Senator Walsh of Montana, delivered the latest thrust in the give-and-take between Bishop James Cannon, Jr., and the senate lobby committee today with a contradiction of the churchman's contention that lack of a quorum at the meeting he walked out on precluded any legal guilt of contempt.

In a statement published this morning, Cannon said he intended no discovery to the committee by walking out at Thursday's session.

The Montanan, acting chairman of the committee, said the fact only two committeemen were present did not excuse Cannon from being in contempt for leaving without permission. He added the churchman had appeared as a voluntary witness put could not leave without the committee's consent. But Cannon believes the contrary to be true.

Indications were that some action against Cannon would be proposed but a definite plan of procedure will not be determined until the return of Chairman Caraway from Arkansas.

Caraway has sided with Cannon in his refusal to answer questions about his 1928 political activities. He is expected back in Washington Monday, and a meeting of the committee has been called for Wednesday.

A close vote is in prospect on any proposal to move against the defiant churchman. Senator Robinson, Republican, Indiana, is understood to side with Caraway.

Walsh and Senator Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin, believe the committee did not exceed its powers in questioning Cannon about his political activities.

This would leave the deciding vote with Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, who has not made his position public.

3 COURSES OPEN

Reiterating that Cannon's "action was plain contempt of the senate," Walsh explained three courses of procedure were open. He said the bishop could be cited to the senate, which could then be called upon to submit the record of the proceedings to the district attorney. This course was pursued against Harry F. Sinclair by the senate lands committee and the wealthy oil man was sent to jail.

A second course, he said, would be to ask the senate for specific authority to question Cannon concerning his political activities. This would necessitate subpoenaing the bishop before the committee unless he appeared again as a voluntary witness.

The third possibility would be to drop the case.

Walsh would not indicate what action he favored, but before the bishop refused to answer questions he was warned by the Montanan he would have to accept the consequences.

Walsh said the maximum penalty the senate could impose on the bishop for walking out on the committee would be to reprimand him.

When Cannon left the committee room, while being questioned by Blaine, he said over his shoulder that if the investigators wished to subpoena him he would be at his office. He insisted the committee had no right to ask about his political activities.

Caraway said yesterday at Jonesboro, Ark. his home, that he had no intention of subpoenaing Cannon.

BADGER VETS 13TH IN NATIONAL PARADE

Wisconsin department of the American legion is expected to march in at least thirteenth position in the national convention parade at Boston in the fall, according to schedules now prepared. Position in the parade is determined by the increase in 1930 membership over 1929.

Posts throughout the state which have delinquent memberships still have a chance to get their members into state and national department headquarters before June 15, at which time the final drawings will be made. On June, Wisconsin's thirteenth position was assured by a 102 per cent of last year's membership renewal and reported.

Arizona, with 172 per cent increase 5,173 vets in 1930 compared to 3,004 for 1929, is expected to lead the national convention parade.

Lutheran Synod Debates Church Regime Changes

Rock Island, Ill.—(AP)—Proposals to change the form of church government faced 2,000 delegates to the 11st annual convention of the Lutheran Augustana synod as the first business session opened today.

Clerical and lay delegates from the United States, Canada and foreign mission fields assembled for the formal opening of the convention last night. Dr. C. A. Lund of Escanaba, Mich., preached a sermon on "Our Work, Our Danger, and Our Victory." The same theme was used by Dr. T. N. Hasselquist at the organization of the synod at Clinton, Wis., 70 years ago.

Controversy over the form of church government was seen after the synodical council indicated it would recommend that a bishop's cross received by Dr. G. A. Brandelle of Rock Island, be accepted officially.

There are no bishops at present in the Lutheran church in America, although the bishop's cross was conferred upon Dr. J. A. Aasgard of Minneapolis, recently by the Norwegian Lutheran church of America. At present synod and conference heads are called presidents.

Opponents of the council recommendation said such an action would imply formal acceptance of the episcopate form of church government, while advocates claimed acceptance had no special significance as the synod presidents are regarded as possessing the rank of bishop.

Dr. Brandelle, who received the bishop's cross from Archbishop Nathan Soderblom, primate of the church of Sweden, was invited to attend the fourth general conference of the Lutheran bishops of Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland and Iceland in Siguna, Sweden, June 28.

COURT PRESENTATION CANCELLATION STIRS COMMENT IN LONDON

London—(AP)—Mystery today surrounded cancellation of the court presentation of "Mrs. Christopher Courtney" at the first royal court at Buckingham palace May 14.

The official London Gazette published the sparse three line notice: "Lord Chamberlain's Office. 'St. James Palace. 'Voice is hereby given that the presentation of Mrs. Christopher Courtney at their majesties' court on May 14, has been cancelled."

The London morning press republished the announcement, but made little hazard as to identity of the Mrs. Courtney, evidently fearing to name the wrong person. Only two papers ventured to name the person they believed to be the presentee, now disavowed.

Reports of the May 14, court said that Mrs. Courtney was presented by Lady Salmund, wife of Sir John Salmund, the air marshal. The Daily Express today, seeking communication with Lady Salmund, was told by her husband, "my wife and I have no statement to make about it. Lady Salmund is upset at inquiries and it is impossible for anyone to see her."

Neither was there any suggestion as to why the court action was taken. The records of presentees usually are investigated thoroughly. Divorcees have always been persona non grata.

There were more than 500 women presented at the royal court on the night of May 14, most of them by the diplomatic corps. They included eight American debutantes.

PERSUASION

"Do you believe in advertising, Mr. Marston," asked a new salesman of a well known dealer in the Midwest.

"Son," was the reply, "when I was a lad on the farm we had 22 cows to milk, night and morning. I found that it always took one kind of persuasion to drive those cows in, and another kind of persuasion to milk 'em. It is advertising that drives the customers into the store — it is salesmanship that finishes the job."

Advertising and salesmanship are two branches of the same organized effort.

Advertising is working on people in the mass; salesmanship on people in the individual.

Advertising prepares the individual for salesmanship.

But however you put it, remember that advertising is always ready to do salesmanship a service — if salesmanship refuses the aid, salesmanship is very shortsighted, indeed.—Meredit's Merchandise Advertising; reprint from Minnesota Press.

Nation Needs New "Frontiers," Fraternity Is Told

SPEAKER SAYS AMERICA JUST DRIFTING NOW

Mrs. Marvin B. Rosenberry Offers Analysis of Modern Problems

The need for present day substitutes for the frontier and what it represented, frontier spirit and frontier virtue, was the subject of a searching analysis of modern problems by Mrs. Marvin B. Rosenberry, Ph. D., in an address at Peabody hall Friday evening. The speech, the annual Phi Beta Kappa address, marked the opening of commencement activities at Lawrence college.

Declaring that as a nation America is drifting with no objective, Mrs. Rosenberry offered new frontiers as a solution to the political, economic and religious problems of today, a substitution of new adventures, material and spiritual, for the adventures of the frontier.

The speaker described the settlement of America, through the numerous emigrations to the west over a period of 275 years, until finally the last frontier was gone. She pointed to the similarity in reasons for the emigrations, economic advantage, social opportunity, political freedom, religious toleration, idealism of one sort or another, pure "wanderlust," with the desire for freedom, for liberty, opportunity and individual expression at the bottom.

She spoke of the characteristics of the frontiersman, his excessive idealism, a limited belief in himself and his possibilities, a cock-sureness born of experience, a quick inventiveness, a disregard of conventionalities, a dress, manners and opinions, and a kindness and hospitality unparalleled in the world, combined with a directness that was often narrow, a lack of experience that often became intolerance, an unpleasant conceit, a "touchy" pride in his country, and above all an idealism, such as George Washington in his Farewell Address, Lincoln in his Gettysburg Address, and Woodrow Wilson depicted.

FACTIONS MUST HARMONIZE
With the last frontier gone, she asserted, a discontented minority can no longer emigrate, and in some new community become a dominant majority. Thus comes the task of harmonizing the wills of the majority and of the discontented minority on the ground where their disagreement takes place.

Mrs. Rosenberry spoke of the developments of the last century, of the change from agriculture to industry, the enormous advances in science, communication, transportation, and electricity, of the pressure of population, the demand for new stocks of raw materials, new markets and new highways to these materials and these markets.

"No adjustment commensurate with the magnitude of these developments has been made," she asserted. "As a nation we are drifting, with no objective. Congress meets, goes home, with no settled or forward looking policy on agriculture, on tariff, on foreign affairs in China, Nicaragua, Mexico or anywhere else. And our president and his advisers, we are told, have a sigh of relief when congress adjourns and drop back temporarily into the body of our citizenry without having done any positive harm."

The world war showed us that the tremendous economic pressure within every nation had become so great that it was a soap-bubble, stretched to its last strength, something that would burst. That readjustments must be made within each nation and between and among nations, has become obvious to all thoughtful people.

"MUST FIND SUBSTITUTES"
The fundamental problem, declared Mrs. Rosenberry, is the discovery of substitutes for the old frontier. One of these, she suggested, is a change in respect to education, to attempt, in formal education, to catch up with the development of the country into an industrial nation. She pointed to the obsolete custom of holding school for five days a week, and suggested a year, a system ill-adapted to a life where homes have no small tasks before or after school, Saturdays or through the long vacation, for those idle hands that find much mischief in a complicated city life. This scheme, she stated, was wholesome in the agricultural days, when children were needed on farms and through the summer, but now it is without purpose. She applauded the colleges where students learn their own living, and the "provocative" students who know why they have come to college.

Business, she said, presents another great adventure. "Business now has world aspects, where not long since it was confined to a nation or a few states," she declared. In the matter of tariffs, the debtor and creditor nations of the world must get together at the earliest possible moment and consider what lowering of tariffs each nation is willing to make, and along what lines of reciprocity future interchange of goods is to take place. If we do not wish to see a financial debacle such as the world has never seen before. Tariffs are no longer a matter of log-rolling, but of scientific study.

"PRAISES CIVIC CLUBS"
"Sinclair Lewis and H. L. Menckens," she said, "are such as they like at our clubs of business and professional men such as the Rotary, Kiwanis and the like; but it is probable that these organizations do more to raise the standards of personal and business integrity among their members than either of the above named writers are apt to do. The 'insidious' and 'winning' of a high-minded character of the public is going on everywhere, and it behooves us to look to the various committees and boards and to the civic clubs."

BLACK CREEK MAN TRIES TO END LIFE

The condition of August Bladorn, 60, who attempted to end his life by shooting himself in the head with a rifle last Saturday at his farm home four miles southeast of Black Creek, is improving, according to the attending physician. The shot entered the top of his head, but did not injure him seriously. Bladorn, who lives with his two sons and a daughter, had been melancholy over failing health for some time, it was said.

SCIENCE REVEALS ILLEGAL STATION

Radio Broadcasting System Uncovered in Apparently Empty House

New York—(P)—A bloodhound of science today was given credit by federal agents for the discovery of an unlicensed radio station set up by bootleggers to communicate with ships at sea.

Search for the illegal station was started four weeks ago when Wendell Patten, a coast guardman, picked up strange signals while listening in on the station radio set. Yesterday federal agents raided an apparently vacant house in Brooklyn and found the station that science said would be there.

The device used was a direction finder, a small set with a loop antenna, a number of which had been set in various parts of the city. Calculations were made on the basis of sound volume. After much experimenting lines drawn on a map of Brooklyn and based on the sound volume crossed in front of 1735 Tropic ave.

Although the direction finders said the station must be there the federal men found an apparently vacant two-story frame house on the roof of which no radio wires could be seen. For several days the agents lay in wait and noted that two men would enter the building each night before the signals started.

They finally raided the house and found a set and an operator. The antenna had been concealed in the attic and the short wave sender in the cellar. The transmitter and tubes were hidden in a side wall of the house. The operator was held on a charge of operating an unlicensed station.

Bret Harro and Mark Twain. Rough and ready, narrow and intolerant they may have been; but the pioneers did not lack the courage to take vice and obscenity and perversion by the scruff of the neck and throw it outside the pale."

Social service work was another adventure offered by Mrs. Newberry, with special emphasis upon social service work of world proportions. She explained what the United States could do to help the present struggle in China, by assuming the role of a beloved friend to that country.

In suggesting politics and political life as another adventure, the speaker described the type of man elected to public office. "Men are all aware of the poor quality of the men whom, on the whole, we choose for the public service. Very few cities are proud of their mayor, very few states of their legislatures. It is still a question of old men, with thinking still 30 years behind times, holding places which only young men, can make effective."

STRESSES CULTURE
Mrs. Newberry devoted considerable time to the analysis of the study of beauty in all its aspects, and of the development of this youthful nation along cultural lines such as music, drama, sculpture, painting, poetry, literature, science and greatest of all, religion. In her discussion of the latter she said, "Religion is the greatest of all the motivating forces in human action. Science is the search for truth in the material world, religion is the search for truth in the spiritual world. Science works by experiment, religion by faith. Science aims to explain life, religion life. There is no conflict between the two. Life is, and from that point science starts."

In conclusion she listed the tasks involved in the substitution of these new frontiers, the recruiting of devoted, enthusiastic leaders, preferably younger people, the improvement of our faculty systems of democratic and representative government, the bringing up of the standard of the home, physically and spiritually, the present-day conditions, the development of the schools so as to raise the general average of personal intelligence and integrity, and the making of the colleges and universities preeminently places where leadership of all sorts may emerge.

LAWYER OUTLINES FATE OF WINNEBAGO TRIBE OF INDIANS

Likens History of Redmen to Case of Arcadians in "Evangeline"

Washington—(P)—The case of the Winnebago Indians vs. the United States today was outlined in its "human elements" by Ralph Hoyt Case, the Washington attorney who eventually will clothe the Winnebago claims in legal verbiage for court cases.

He compared their fate to that of the Arcadians as set forth in the poem "Evangeline."

Declaring that in all Indian annals "no wrong has been committed so wholly unjustifiable as the wrong committed by the United States against the Winnebagoes, Case asserted his intention to secure, if possible, broader legislation covering the Winnebago claims rather than proceeding under the act of December 17, 1858.

Case, who is acting under contract as attorney for the two branches of the tribe, one in Wisconsin, the other in Nebraska, declared that the present jurisdictional bill "does not permit the Winnebago people to make proof of the actual financial losses they have suffered."

He set forth the Winnebago grievance against the government as follows: "The facts are that the Winnebagoes have always been at peace with the white citizens of the United States."

"In 1853, the Santee Indians (Mdwakanton and Wahpekuta) together with elements of the Sisseton and Wahpeton Indians, rose against the authority of the United States in the famous Minnesota uprising. The Winnebagoes were one hundred and fifty miles away, peaceful, quiet and well-behaved, living on their farms on their reservation at Blueearth, Minn."

"The result of the uprising was voiced throughout the north-east territory in a demand that all Indians be removed from Minnesota. 'The Winnebagoes were the innocent bystanders. Yet, by force they were removed from their habitations, their reservation confiscated, their homes and property destroyed.'

"They were removed in a body to Fort Thompson, Dakota Territory, where under most deplorable conditions, the remnants for a period of four years suffered from lack of food, clothing and shelter."

"A part of the survivors, moved by that irresistible impulse that actuates the homing pigeon, secretly built rafts and canoes and embarked on the Missouri river. Journeying by night, hiding by day, they made their way down the river to its junction with the Mississippi, and from there, by that toil and hardship they way up the Mississippi and back to their old camping ground which had been their home before they were removed to the Blueearth Reservation in Minnesota."

"This, of course, was the present Wisconsin branch of the tribe. Attorney Case also sketched the history of the present Nebraska branch."

"The remainder of the tribe, in 1850, were removed from Fort Thompson, Dakota Territory, to the present Winnebago Reservation near Sioux City, Iowa, but in the state of Nebraska, where they began to rebuild their homes and their community life," he said.

Of both branches he set forth, "No compensation has ever been made for the deportation, the destruction of their homes, the loss of their property, the years of imprisonment."

"They had adopted the house, the clothes, the implements and the practices of the white man's civilization, and were living in peace and quiet, when at a distant point the act of another tribe utterly destroyed them."

"It is unfortunate that no great American poet has been inspired to write another 'Evangeline' setting out the tragedy which fell upon these innocent people."

"In the absence of popular sympathy, it is my purpose to ask the Congress for legislation which will permit, at least, the recovery of the value of lands and property taken, upon the basis with which the United States would settle with one of its white citizens."

Attorney Case explained he has drawn a bill which is now being considered by the tribal councils in Nebraska and Wisconsin, and which has been presented to Rep. Edgar Howard, of Nebraska, characterized by Case as "the staunch friend of the Winnebagoes for many years."

He added that it is expected the bill will be presented to Congress in December with claims "as broad but not broader than has already been enacted in behalf of the Sioux nation, the Cherokee and the other Five Civilized Tribes."

Under the present bill, he reiterated, "the Winnebago people can expect to make more than a fractional recovery of what is actually due them and possibly might make no recovery at all."

LAWYERS TO OPEN WAR ON PRACTICES OF FINANCE GROUPS

Attack Practice of Firms Offering Legal Service to Public

BY LEMUEL F. PARTON
Copyright 1936 by Cons. Press
New York—(CPA)—It was learned here today that the impending battle of the lawyers against banks and trust companies, revealed by a report of the New York County Lawyers' association, will be waged throughout the United States and in Canada. In St. Louis, Cleveland and Toronto the fight already has begun and lawyers here predict it will be a definitely national encounter.

The lawyers protest against the great fiduciary institutions "engaging in the practice of law." They insist that the members of their profession inevitably will become clerks and mere hired men if the "mechanization of the profession" continues. Quoting former Senator J. Henry Harrison, of New Jersey, they assailed legal "franchise" which the lawyers themselves have created.

Pending a joint report by four committees of the New York County Lawyers' association and the executive committee of the American Bar association, the lawyers are keeping details to themselves, but it is known that both state legislative campaigns and advertising campaigns are being considered.

QUESTION OTHERS

While the lawyers deplore the fact that their colleagues are "dragged into" the advertising campaigns of the trust companies, they raise the question as to whether, collectively, their professional ethics would not allow them to state their case to the public. They cite the action of the New York doctors in united public statements on health matters and believe they might find the same justification in setting forth "the invasion of the intimate and traditionally personal relationship between lawyer and client."

In Canada, the fight is headed up in Toronto, under the leadership of R. J. MacLennan, chairman of the committee on encroachments of the conference of the governing bodies of the legal profession. The committee has sent a questionnaire to banks and trust companies throughout Canada—an action which the New York lawyers also are taking. In Cleveland the bar association has reached an understanding with three of the largest banks by which the latter agree not to advertise any service which involves legal practice; that they will not hire solicitors, will not draw wills and will handle no legal business for others in transactions in which they are parties in interest.

It was about ten years ago that legislation was enacted in nearly every state recognizing the corporate fiduciary and widely extending the powers of banks and trust companies. Opposition of the lawyers has been steadily increasing and culminated last fall in a concerted movement, soon after the trust development conference was held in New York.

"At this conference," said a leading New York lawyer today, "the trust companies stressed their advertising methods and revealed beyond all question that the lawyer is being harnessed up to the high-pressure, go-getter system. High pressure salesmanship is all right in its place, but we believe such procedure attacks the ethics of our profession. Furthermore, it is making it steadily more difficult for a man to get anywhere in the law. In every big city, these companies can get a virtual monopoly on the trust estate business. There are a few high priced lawyers among their allies who prey on it, but the rest of the lawyers engaged might as well be clerks."

"The personal relation between a lawyer and his client is just as important as it is in the medical profession. It cannot exist under this mechanized system and it will wreck the legal profession if it continues. The banks and trust companies have powerful means of reaching public opinion which we have not. But we have one weapon and we intend to use it. Through the bar association we can impose standards of lawyerlike conduct on our members."

Prince Carol Returns To Rumania To Assume Power

ing Carol's return, Carol said he had come back to Rumania because of the bad economic situation of the country. His previous renunciation, he said, had occasioned grave uncertainty concerning Rumania at home and abroad. He then told the press that his work would be to restore Rumania's prestige and welfare.

GAINS POPULARITY

For several weeks there has been a growing agitation in favor of the young prince-father's coming back to his homeland, an eventually which he sought for months past. Chief opposition seemed to lie in old Liberal elements represented by the government of M. Bratianu of two years ago.

There were various reports as to the attitude of his family toward his return. Princess Helen of Greece, mother of Michael, and his divorced wife, was said to have objected strenuously and to have threatened to leave Rumania if he did come back. She refused, it was said, to become reconciled with him, even though he broke with Mme. Lupescu. Prince Carol renounced his rights to the Rumanian throne on Dec. 31, 1925, and disappeared from his country, to be heard from next in Milan, Italy, where he had Mme. Lupescu as a companion. Unless, secretly, he has not been in Rumania since until yesterday.

It has been an open secret for months that Carol had negotiated with emissaries of the present government, headed by M. Maniu and based on his leadership of the Peasants' party, to return to Rumania. The negotiations were in fact so well known that the Liberals, always opposed to him, began an active campaign headed by his chief, Bentile Bratianu, to thwart their plans.

They distributed a pamphlet calling attention to Carol's unconditional renunciation of the throne. The pamphlet was suppressed and confiscated by the government but the

NO EXCUSE FOR HIGHER TARIFF

The North American Review has conducted a poll of newspapers throughout the country to determine the attitude toward the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill. It reports that three out of every four newspapers making replies are opposed to it. Undoubtedly this percentage will hold good among the entire list of newspapers. Probably it would run even higher.

Revision of the tariff upward has been undertaken at a time when there was no popular demand for it, and no excuse for it that anyone could detect. It has had the appearance from start to finish of a grab-bag procedure for the benefit of special interests. It was started long before the crash in the stock market and can have no relation whatsoever to the depression that followed, either as a cause or as a corrective.

The bill which is being enacted has definitely placed the Hoover administration on the defensive. Not only is there a general feeling that increased duties on industrial products are unnecessary and unfair to the consumer, but that they are being forced through to the detriment of American foreign interests and trade and in face of the fact that our exports are already beginning to show a decline.

The direct benefits to agriculture are entirely speculative, while the indirect benefits are negative and the net balance undoubtedly harmful. Regardless of how the politicians and privileged interests feel about it, we believe President Hoover would strengthen himself in the confidence of the American people if he were to veto this measure. We cannot help but feel that he will make a mistake in signing it.

FRANCE ISN'T ALARMED

France does not show alarm over the grandiose and bellicose utterances of Premier Mussolini. She does not need to have any fear. She is so much more powerful in resources and in her military establishment that Italy can constitute no menace to her as far as one can penetrate the future. As M. Tardieu has expressed it, France, is strong and is conscious of her strength. She does not need, therefore, either to boast or to be afraid. It would be suicidal for Italy to invite war with this neighbor. Mussolini has strained his country's finances to the utmost in his state works, improvements and displays of political greatness. France has the largest and best equipped army in the world today, besides which that of Italy would make no appreciable showing. Mussolini has concentrated himself on the black shirts, but they do not constitute an army. They have been trained to domestic terrorism and jingoism rather than to military ways.

Mussolini is in a position where he must speak loudly and flourish his arms wildly to be heard or seen, otherwise he would be ignored. He blusters and fumes and threatens, but it is ninetieths bark. Italy's sphere on the continent and in the Mediterranean is circumscribed and must remain so. Colonial expansion is not open to her and her frontiers are fixed. Indeed, she is in danger of having at some time to contract her boundaries. A naval race between France and Italy would be altogether one-sided. It is not to be thought of and Mussolini does not expect to engage in it. Again here he is talking for effect, to obtain concessions and to impose treaty restrictions upon France. There should be no international concern about trouble directly between the two nations. The only way it could possibly occur would be indirectly, through Italy's embroiling herself in the D-Fans where French interests are involved.

MICHIGAN'S CAMPAIGN

Michigan promises to have a picturesque senatorial campaign. Chase S. Osborn, former governor of the state, has announced his candidacy in opposition to Senator Couzens who is up for reelection. Mr. Osborn is a dynamic personality and a dramatic campaigner. He is wealthy and he is a skillful politician. In philosophy although not in methods he is somewhat on the Gifford Pinchot order. He is a reformer, a conservationist, and a combination of the progressive and conservative. Last but not least, he is a persuasive orator, and what may be of consequence in Michigan, a constructive dry. By this we mean that he is not a fanatical prohibitionist, but is opposed to the extremes of the wets and the license of the liquor traffic.

Senator Couzens is one of the notably successful businessmen of Michigan, one of its industrial giants and also a man of great wealth. He has been a sort of iconoclast in politics, violently denouncing the forces of reaction at times and disillusioning the public on some of its pet traditions in politics and government. He has been involved in controversies with the administration ever since he has been in the senate, and has done a lot of speech making with a minimum of action.

We do not know that Michigan or the country would lose a great deal by his retirement. They might or might not gain from the substitution of Mr. Osborn, but there are some circumstances in the situation which invite the change with public profit. Although both men have money, it will not be a Pennsylvania primary. Mr. Couzens is committed against excessive election expenditures, and Mr. Osborn both by principle and his past is wholly opposed to it. Nevertheless, it will be a melodramatic and resounding campaign and one to arouse the intense interest and partisanship of voters.

THE OLD-AGE PENSION

During the next decade or so the subject of old-age pensions will come in for a lot more attention in America than it has ever had before. That is putting it mildly, of course, for it has hardly had any attention at all so far; but in a few years it will be arousing a lot of discussion.

People are beginning to realize that the community has a certain responsibility in respect to the support of the aged. Nevertheless, an old-age pension of any consequence is bound to be highly expensive.

For instance: the Massachusetts legislature is now considering an old-age pension bill which, if passed, would add a considerable load to the state's budget. Yet it calls for payments of only $8 a week to men over 65 and women over 60.

If Massachusetts passes this bill it will be doing a liberal thing. Yet $8 is not a very sizable income, any way you look at it.

What Others Say

THE TRIBUNE WILL CONTINUE POLICY

(From the La Crosse Tribune)
The La Crosse Tribune does not believe that citizens of La Crosse as a whole will approve the criticism made of this paper for its publication of the names of drunken drivers, by a group of men meeting at the Hotel La Crosse Monday night.

Drunken driving is one of the most condemnable and dangerous evils with which the law has to deal. Every drunken driver is a potential killer and the fact that it is not sufficient argument to keep an intoxicated person away from the driving wheel, that he is chancing the murder of some innocent man, woman, or child, necessitates that more forceful means than argument be employed to regulate his habits.

Heavy penalty by the court for the offense is one step in such regulation. The publication of the names of offenders by newspapers is another. The weight that such publication has with the drunken driver is illustrated many times each week as the Tribune when offenders fined by the court have come to plead that their names be omitted from the court list, a favor which in fairness to others in the same predicament, cannot be granted. The disgrace which the average drunken driver feels is brought to his name by such publicity is ample proof of his realization of how badly he has overstepped the boundary of good behavior. It is very seldom indeed that a name need ever be repeated for this offense.

The practice of publishing drunken driver names is a national one. It is a weapon of incalculable value to the law of this country and one which no town or newspaper can afford to abolish.

The argument that by such publication visitors to the city are intimidated is silly. It is our idea that La Crosse is not solicitous of the violation of drunken drivers. If the fear of having names published will keep such offenders from our city and our traffic, or if such publication gives the impression of leniency to their names, the La Crosse Tribune will feel rewarded for its efforts in printing this phase of court news.

The printing of court news is of little value to a newspaper from a news standpoint. Its publication as an aid to court penalty is part of a program of public service which no civic-conscious paper can ignore. The Tribune will continue to print the names of drunken drivers.

GIVE Bishop Cannon a lot of credit. Perhaps he has talked himself into one predicament after another, but he put a severe dent in that favorite senatorial publicity-grabbing stunt—the investigating committee—by taking the matter in his own hands and doing what a lot of other Americans should have done. He walked out on the committee, and politely invited it to jump in the Potomac. Why can't a few more people do that?

Poor Kenosha, for the next ten years she has to fight against the census figures, which give her 49,844. The police dug up enough people who said they hadn't been counted to raise the total to 51,257. Maybe the 1,413 who make up the difference thought the census takers were bill collectors a few months ago.

A man recently yawned so hard that his jaws locked, preventing him from saying anything about it. If ten-peaked husbands are now beginning to keep their better eight-ninths up late.

What State Was That We Just Went Through?

In order to meet competition in the future from airplanes, the Pennsylvania railroad is contemplating speeding up its trains to 90 miles an hour. People will probably stop running after trains, but the grade-crossing dumb bell will keep right up to his same tricks.

RECIPROCITY TREATY

On June 7, 1854, the Marcy-Elgin treaty between the United States and Great Britain, which regulated reciprocal commercial relations with Canada and Newfoundland, was signed.

Under terms of the treaty the natural products of each country were to be exchanged without duty. The articles exchanged were to be the produce of the farm, forest, mine and fisheries. The treaty also provided for the liberal fishing privileges for American fishermen and mutual transportation rights.

Although the treaty was to remain in force for 10 years it was actually in operation for 11. At the outset it was beneficial to both countries, but as time progressed the preponderance of commercial advantage was heavily in favor of Canada. One of the reasons why the United States abrogated the treaty was that Canada extended sympathy and assistance to Confederate refugees in their hostile movements along the border during the Civil War.

CHANCE FOR HOLY FRIGHTS TO BECOME LESS SO.

Sixteen male patients in a hospital for nervous and mental diseases were placed on a special diet which yielded approximately 4,000 calories a day. On this diet they made an average weekly gain, per patient, of three pounds in weight.

Lots of holy frights not in hospitals and not even nutty or not very nutty, take as much good food as that and yet do not gain a pound. What's the secret. It is insulin. These frights in the hospital—say we call them hospital frights to distinguish them from the ones outside whom we will call holy frights—the hospital frights received three doses of insulin each day along with their three meals.

Now it is unfortunately true that a good many holy frights are of the gentle sex. Yes, and some of them would be knockouts if they only had a dozen pounds of padding, just a scant dozen pounds. Well, not every one of them, but not a few of them can get it in a month or so if they wish. Any good doctor anywhere can give the insulin injections—or the doctor can instruct an intelligent patient how to take them herself.

Insulin is good only for an hour or two, and so it must be injected at about the time of the meal if it is to enable the patient to utilize the carbohydrates.

Thirteen female patients in the same hospital were given the same diet for four weeks without any insulin, and each gained a little less than a pound a week. Then for three more weeks each received a dose of insulin with each meal, and on the diet plus insulin each gained 23 pounds a week, on the average. One patient who had not taken the preliminary diet without insulin, gained 11 pounds in 13 days, and besides showed considerable mental improvement.

The last point is important. If a holy fright has the makings of a lovely lady in her, insulin is all the more likely to bring out her better traits. I do not mean that this is the criterion for selecting cases suitable for the insulin treatment, though I do think a holy fright who is a little bit of all right in the temperament is pretty certain to acquire the saving 12 pounds of flesh in this way, that is, if she can find a doctor who knows his insulin.

Insulin can do harm if unintelligently used. Under proper medical supervision, however, it will do no harm and may put many a poor thing in line for a well deserved yet hitherto unattainable romance.

I am quite sincere about this. In fact I am tempted to open a special insulin shooting clinic myself and invite all the holy frights to join our class, and offer prizes or penalties according to the results, say the girl who puts on the most flesh in the shortest time would win the privilege of kissing the head doctor, and the one at the other end of the list would exact the same penalty, only from the intern.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Booze By Any Other Name.
I am 55 years of age and I plan to make a trip to Europe this summer. Do you think good port wine . . . (B. D. M.)

There is on the market a medicine called Tonic. It is a wine into which some medical properties have been introduced to make it lawful to sell anywhere. I am advised to take this . . . (A. T.)

Answer—No one who is able to travel needs alcohol. I do not mean to say that indulgence in the port wine of Europe or the fake "tonic" of these United States would necessarily do any harm, but I do not recommend the use of any kind of alcoholic medicine except in grave illness when the physician deems it necessary.

Flavored Alloys.

My son who is sadly in need of a luscious, has tried several times to take your remedy. Flavored, and every time he takes a spoonful he breaks out with hives, and it even swells in his throat . . . (Mrs. A. H.)

Answer—In the first place I have never advised taking flaxseed as a physic. Your son apparently is sensitized to flax. He can only avoid flax or its products as carefully as possible. If he suffers other troubles it might be well to have a physician test his sensitivity and perhaps immunize him.

Wrong Shop.

I have heard much about high blood pressure, but how about some talks about low blood pressure, with symptoms, etc. (Miss M. H.)

Answer—Neither high blood pressure or low blood pressure is an ailment of itself, so there are no symptoms. Anyway, it is much better for the patient to tell her symptoms to her doctor. Where doctors provide prospective patients with symptoms of this or that ailment, it is usually a case of the quack looking for trade. To imagine or even to know by measurement that the blood pressure is high or low gives the doctor no clue as to what ails the patient. It may be high or low in any number of conditions. Only charlatans pretend to have remedies or to give treatment for "high blood pressure."

Sweating Feet.

Troubled the last four years with excessive sweating of feet: Change socks sometimes four times a day. Many remedies tried, with no benefit. (A. A.)

Answer—Paint skin of soles and between toes with solution of 1 ounce of formaldehyde in 7 ounces of water, once daily for a week, and let dry before putting on stockings. (Copyright John F. Dille Co.)

The Tinymites

By Hal Cochran

WEE Clowny eyed the cart and said, "Say, as for me, I think I'd dread to ride around in that thing. I'd be 'traid that it would tip. Why, only two wheels seems a fright. It always must be balanced right. I always worry 'bout that just enough to spoil my trip."

"Well, well," the Travel Man replied. "That is because you've never tried a wagon of this type. You see, it's all in knowing how. Whenever the horse is hitched up tight the whole thing's bound to work all right. Come over to the wagon and I'll give you the proof right now."

So, to the wagon they all ran. Then Scouty, to the wagon man said, "Can we ride your wagon 'round and have a little fun? We'll gladly pay you and, of course, we'll be real patient with your horse."

The man replied, "Why, sure!" And "was no sooner said than done. Wee Clowny soon found out that he was just as wrong as he could be in thinking that the wagon would not stand up straight and sound. When everyone had gaily tried his luck and had a dandy ride, the Travel Man said, "Well, let's go. To other spot's we're bound."

Real shortly they all heard a toot. A man was blowing on a flute. "Oh, look! He has a cave and in it is a parakeet," cried Copy. Then the whole bunch heard him ask about the pretty bird. The man said, "He tells fortunes and he does it very near."

"You pay a small amount and then the bird will chirp—then chirp again. And then he'll pull a small card from the little box you see. Upon this card you'll find a tell, no matter if you're young or old. Now, if you'd like to read your fortune, give a coin to me."

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

New York—Among the Broadway stories that are waiting to be written is one about the girl who pays the price of notoriety.

The payment, it should be explained, usually is in the cancellation of ambitious dreams. What seemed a worthwhile leap to stardom for the one who took it, turned out to be a misstep. For example:

A few years ago a girl with a promising future was conceded to be the most comely of a certain musical comedy cast.

The blame for the subsequent happenings and her own disappointments probably rests entirely on someone else. Through the exploitation of the show, there was a momentary scandal, soon forgotten.

But the effect on the girl's career was more enduring. She never had another prominent part in a show. The last time I saw her, until the other evening, was in the floor show of an indifferent night club.

The other evening I met her in the lobby of a hotel and, curious about her story, asked her where she now was dancing. She said, rather apologetically, I thought, that she was a hostess in a speakeasy.

The irony of it is that she does not drink, nor smoke, never has suffered the linking of her name with that of any man and prefers a bridge game to more exciting amusements. All of which would be difficult to make Broadway believe.

AMATEUR MOVIE MAN

Society has taken to the theater, especially debutantes who have graduated a yearling to become actresses.

Now a couple of young society men are in the movies, not as players, but producers.

They are W. Douglas Burden, world traveler, and W. C. Chanler, a lawyer.

Their film which is showing on Broadway, is "The Silent Enemy," a silent picture of the wild life of the northwest Indians.

Young Burden, who is still in his twenties, is the one who brought back a pair of dragon hounds from the Dutch East Indies three years ago. His wife, who has accompanied him on some of his trips of exploration, was in the cast of "Holiday" last year as Barbara White.

REAL STUFF

Burden has made frequent trips to the Canadian northwest, where the picture was made with real Indian characters, and got the idea for his production when he saw the jungle film "Chang."

He sketched out a scenario combining science and drama, the central theme being the Indians' struggle against starvation and their hunting of the caribou.

He believes he has made a permanent record of the Indians in the Ontario region, which 10 years hence probably could not be filmed because of the inroads that disease and starvation are making on the various tribes.

He owes more to his father's wisdom than he who has a great deal left him does to his father's care."

A BYSTANDER IN WASHINGTON

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington—Presenting an independent of independents in the United States senate:

JOHN JAMES BLAINE

He is immensely proud that he is known as a "bolter" and an "independent." And when referred to as a "fighter" in this connection nothing pleases him more.

He believes such titles befit his position, for he claims to be the political heir, with "Young Bob" La Follette, of "Old Bob" La Follette. He deems it no wrong to "bolt." And he answers his critics always with a reason for his action.

Thus he went to Wilson after Wisconsin had gone against Taft in 1912, because he regarded the former as more nearly meeting the progressive views. Then he left Wilson when he thought the war President had deserted the progressive cause.

HIS REASONS

He saw no reason for explaining his support of "Old Bob" La Follette in 1924. And he justified his swing to Smith in 1928, saying that the New York governor had "challenged corruption in high places and defied privilege in any form."

He alone opposed the Kellogg pact for outlawing war in 1929, because he thought it favored the British and was an empty gesture as far as peace was concerned.

His political milestones are state senator, attorney general of Wisconsin, three governor, and the United States senate. In his forward march he has had only one setback—defeat for congress at the outset of his political career.

The only political leadership he has ever recognized was that of "Old Bob."

Mrs. Hoover's Absence To Slow Down Capital Society

BY SALLIE V. H. FICKETT
Washington — (AP) — With Mrs. Hoover in the president's camp on the Rapidan river in Virginia for an indefinite stay, and Miss Mary Randolph, official White House social secretary, permanently resigned from her position, it looks very much like a long social drought has struck in Washington, at least as far as the White House is concerned.

The reason given concerning the resignation of Miss Randolph was that she had "nothing to do." Mrs. Hoover, however, retains the services of Miss Ruth Fessler and Miss Hall, both of whom she took to the mansion with her and who have always looked after her social correspondence.

Accompanying Mrs. Hoover to the camp were a nurse, several friends and a sufficient number of servants to attend her simple needs.

When Mrs. Warren G. Harding left the White House as its mistress, she left a large social staff established in the rooms on the ground floor of the mansion. At the head of the staff was Mr. Rockwell, who for many years handled social affairs in the White House executive offices and was later taken into the mansion. President Coolidge dropped about a dozen stenographers, typists and other clerks in the social secretary's office at one time, materially reducing the size of the force. There has been but little work for Miss Randolph since the close of the official social program.

Mrs. Guy Despard Goff, wife of Senator Goff of West Virginia, and the only senator's wife presented at the Queen's drawing room this season, has become interested, during her London sojourn, in the process of women flyers who flew from Cape Town to Cairo and across the Sahara. Mrs. Goff has spent much time studying aeronautics in the United States and it is not unlikely she will do some flying while in England.

The British embassy in Washington is the scene of an everyday moving day which began June 1 and will continue for several weeks.

Already the majestic drawing rooms of the new embassy building are assuming a stately grandeur and the extensive "orchard" and gardens which include a swimming pool, tennis and squash courts and other facilities for recreation, are nearing completion. Garage accommodations for three more cars is in the course of construction. Though the embassy is of gigantic proportions, garage room for only three cars was provided and the embassy being some distance from downtown, secretaries and attaches of the staff were faced with a long walk of adopting the quite general Washington custom of using the street for a garage.

The social drought has not affected cupid's domain and among the several large weddings to take place this week were two today.

One was that of Miss Helen Hoyle Herr, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. John Knowles Herr, U. S. A., to Lieut. Willard A. Holbrook, Jr., son of Major General Willard A. Holbrook, at Bethlehem chapel of the Washington cathedral.

Lieut. Hugh B. Wadell, aide to Major General Charles P. Summerall, chief of state, was chosen for the duties of best man following the ceremony, a reception was scheduled at the army war college.

The other was that of Miss Caroline Charlotte Roebbing to Alexander Burton Hagner at high noon in St. John's church on Lafayette square.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Arthur O'Brien. Her sister, Baroness van der Elst, and Mrs. Robert Clowry Roebbing, her sister-in-law, were matrons of honor, the bridesmaids were Miss Helen Windman and Miss Valerie Graham, and the maid of honor was Miss Jane Illingworth.

LAKES CAPTAIN WILL TAKE ISLAND CENSUS

Duluth — (AP) — The United States government wants to know whether there are any persons who call Isle Royale, the narrow strip of land off the north shore of Lake Superior, their "official residence." A Duluth Great Lakes captain is going to try to serve as the government's agent to take the census of that island.

Isle Royale is considered a part of the state of Michigan and it was part of the duty of the census supervisor at Houghton to enumerate the residents at Isle Royale. He found it difficult, however, and appealed to Clarence Tormore, Duluth supervisor.

Now Captain Martin Christensen, who operates a fishing boat between Duluth and Isle Royale, has volunteered to learn how many men live at the island and consider it their home. It is known that several fishermen spend 12 months at their small cottages, but whether they are residents of other cities has not been determined. During the summer months there are scores of people living at the island, noted as a summer resort.

Last winter there were but six men who braved the cold weather and lived at the island, being completely out of touch with the rest of the world. Captain Christensen has been sailing on the Great Lakes for 20 years and claims to know "everybody who lives on the island."

The Story of Sue

MARGERY HALE

© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

JACK swung around sharply. The knock sounded again. "Open, open I tell you!" In a long stride Jack was across the floor, his broad shoulders squared, the gray eyes slits in his intense face.

He opened the door and flung it wide. Outside the landlady and a man with a shining badge waited. The man laughed a cackling, sinister laugh.

"So you thought you'd pull off something, did you? We got you with the goods, bud!"

"I beg your pardon," Sue's heart, in spite of the discipline she had outlived for it, throbbed at the easy casualness of Jack's tones. "I don't think I understand."

"No? Rather thick-headed, aren't you?"

The woman's mean eyes, which looked like two black beads, from a jet necklace, fastened themselves on Sue in malicious triumph.

"You thought you could come and register at my hotel 'cause it's off in the country and get away with anything, didn't you? But you can't. I run a respectable place. What right had you to be in the girl's room? Answer me. She told me you were just friends!"

Again the man laughed. "New at the game, aren't you? At least the girl. She looks green as they make 'em. Didn't even sign as a married couple. I suppose she wouldn't let you."

The whole plan was plain to Sue now. They weren't being apprehended because of the letter. It was safe. They were going to be arrested because they had talked in the same room. And they couldn't explain why it had been necessary to carry on that particular conversation in private.

"Well, what are you going to do about it?" Jack asked. "Our word of honor won't hold much weight with you, I admit, but we can give it to you."

"Well, for about..." He named a sum of money, not large, and Jack handed him a bill.

"Now get out," the woman ordered. "Leave here right away!"

The lights of the taxi were coming down the street and Sue and Jack were out. But Sue's cheeks were burning and her heart was flaming. And yet the situation was ridiculously funny. She started to laugh and couldn't stop. Jack joined in the merriment. And the taxicab driver turned around to see what had happened.

All her resolves disappeared into the rainy night. She was in a friendly mood again. Jack was being profuse in his apologies and Barbara was a phantom.

"We'll catch a train at midnight," he was saying. "There'll be time to eat first. That hotel dinner was a farce. Sue, you're a perfect peach with whom to do things. You're altogether there and a girl in a million." His warm, clear eyes approved, too.

The motor started to sing a song as it hummed its way through the rainy night. The circles under Sue's eyes danced away and she wasn't tired any longer. She turned a laughing face to Jack as he spoke again. "We won't have to mention anything about tonight to Barbara, will we, Sue?"

News About New Books

CIMARRON—by Edna Ferber.

Review by Eleanor Evans Wing.

"Any thing can happen in Oklahoma," practically says Edna Ferber. This is the spirit, the plot and the atmosphere for the last novel, "Cimarron," by Edna Ferber, published by Doubleday Doran. For the second time in Miss Ferber's career as a novelist she has become a student. In "Showboat" she took her first fling at research uncovering the whole history of life on the Mississippi river and now she has done the same kind of work with pioneer history of Oklahoma.

Cimarron is a Spanish word meaning wild or unruly. The correct pronunciation is Cim-a-rro-n. However, they do not pronounce it that way in Oklahoma. The name is given to a county, a river, in fact to a whole slice of Oklahoma history. In about 1888 it became the name of that no-man's land which lay between Texas and Oklahoma, the empire of the lawless and desperate.

It is useless to write up Edna Ferber. Everything she does is unique in its way and makes the reader conscious of time and time again of the depths of her characterization. In "Cimarron" she has again succeeded in painting two characters that will overshadow anything else that is left in the memory of the book. As in "So Big," the woman is the greatest person, but the man, even in his weakness, is more charming, more volatile, burning with a kind of genius. This is Miss Ferber's way of showing the whole history of Oklahoma, the woman being the pioneer, standing the gaff, and the man with his brains and his weakness and strength making that wild country the queer, inconsistent, unbelievable place that it was in the early nineteenth century.

Maturity is the keynote of the latest novel. Edna Ferber has passed the stage of being facetious about human weakness. She is tolerant; she studies; she does not mimic and her sense of humor has more pathos in it than ridicule.

Read the book first before any other novel that has been published this spring. It will continue with you, intrigue you and hold your interest long after you have finished it.

THREE MEN'S WAR

This book is one of the first books of personal reminiscences, and it is more than that. The war was too colossal in its significance, too overpowering and varied in its aspects for one man to grasp, and yet it is only through individual testimony that the final summing up can be made. The present volume contains three contrasting records and viewpoints. One writer is a professional man drawn into the conflict in maturity; one, a young boy precipitated into the maelstrom from school; the third is a Colonial, unused to the traditions of the British army.

In form and style these records are as varied as in their viewpoints. Mottram, the seasoned soldier and famous writer, uses straight autobiography; John Easton, the young volunteer casts his account in fictional form; while Eric Patridge gives his impressions in the third person.

The scenes of action are the Tyres salted, the Somme and Arras, and there is one impressive interlude in Gallipoli.

Graphic, simple, ungarish by heroes, each record stands as an authentic testimony of war experience.

CARD PARTIES

The last of the series of card parties which was sponsored by the Christian Mothers of St. Mary church took place Friday afternoon at Columbia hall. Twelve tables were in place, prizes at bridge being won by Mrs. John Hughes and Mrs. J. Hobbins and at schafkopf by Mrs. J. Vander Meuse and Mrs. Thomas Long. Mrs. A. Dear Friends:

I was over at the Post-Crescent office the other day, and I heard one of the fellows say, "Well, it all depends on the pitcher."

And I'll tell you, a pitcher is a mighty important thing.

Why, where'd we put lemonade if we didn't have pitchers? And how could we ever get along without lemonade?

That's one thing about a water pitcher. You can use it for so many things. I guess they're even using 'em for vases, now.

By the way, we are having a special in a Pewter water pitcher at $4.75 made by the International Silver Co. And when I say special, I mean SPECIAL!

Always glad to see you in the store.

COMMEMORATE TWO EVENTS AT VALLEY BOY SCOUT RALLY

Flag Day and Covered Wagon Centennial to Be Foundation of Program

Erb park is to be transformed into a veritable tented city June 14 and 15 when approximately 400 valley council boy scouts pitch camp for the annual Camp O'Ral and public demonstration and exhibit, according to M. G. Clark, valley scout executive, who reports that most plans for the rally are in complete form.

The camp rally also will serve to commemorate two annual events, the Covered Wagon Centennial and Flag Day, June 14 and 15, respectively.

A mammoth parade at 10 o'clock Saturday morning will mark the opening of the rally and also will bring back to the minds of old settlers covered wagon days. Two large covered wagons have been secured and will be used in the parade.

Chief George T. Erim and a mounted escort of six police officers will head the long procession after which a number of scout leaders and executives dressed in pioneering costumes will fall in line, followed by the two covered wagons.

The 120th Field Artillery band, and valley council boy scout drum and bugle corps will furnish martial music for the occasion. It is expected the entire membership of scouts of the council will enter the parade.

PLAN STUNT ACTS
Many troops are working out special floats and stunt acts which will be entered in the parade.

The line of march will be from State to Durkee-sts, north on Durkee st to Erb park, where scouts will immediately set to work pitching camp for the two day period.

Over 150 tents will be set up in separate groups, each troop to be assigned to a certain plot of ground. The tents will range in size from large wall tents to small individual pup tents.

A large log cabin, now being prepared by Troop 4 scouts, American legion, at Armory G, is to be moved to the park and will be used as a kitchen. Scouts will prepare their own meals in the open over open brick fireplaces.

Handicraft of every description will be placed on display in various parts of the park to be reviewed by parents and friends of scouts. The displays will include knot-boards, leathercraft, woodcraft, basketry, and many other products fashioned by scouts.

A special program will mark the observance of Flag Day Saturday afternoon. Scouts will stage a flag pageant, after which daylight fireworks will be set off. Rockets in the shape of American flags will be set off, and daylight flares and bombs will add to the impressiveness of the ceremony.

It is expected the 120th Field Artillery band will play a concert at the park Saturday evening, instead of at Pierce park. Taps will be sounded following the evening program after which scouts will turn in for the night.

The Sunday program will open at 7:30 with a good fellowship program to be conducted by the Rev. R. E. Garrison under auspices of the Fox River Valley Ministerial association. Following the services scouts will break camp to attend their own church services.

How To Shop

By William H. Baldwin

There is a great difference between gold-filled and gold-plated jewelry, with the former the more desirable.

Gold-filled means that the gold is filled or lined with brass to give it strength. The quality of gold-filled jewelry depends upon the amount of gold used in proportion to the brass. For example, 1/2 or 1-10 gold-filled jewelry means that the fraction given is the amount of pure gold used in that article. Gold-filled articles usually are stamped to indicate the grade of the solid gold used, such as 10 or 14 karat. If the quality of the gold is not stamped, you are safe in assuming that it is not more than 10 karat.

On the other hand, gold-plated jewelry is base metal with an outside film of gold-plate. Only the cheaper grades of jewelry are made in this way.

TAKE 9 TRAFFIC COUNTS IN COUNTY DURING SUMMER

Census Will Be Taken at Three Places to Determine Flow of Cars

Nine traffic counts are to be taken at three points in the county during the summer, according to Frank Appleton, highway commissioner. Mr. Appleton received instructions this week from N. P. Hayes, maintenance engineer with the state highway department, on where and how the traffic counts are to be taken.

In general the layout of count stations this year is somewhat different than in former years. Mr. Hayes points out. The commission has abandoned the practice of taking counts at highway intersections, believing that this method does not give an honest count of the traffic.

Considerable time and thought was given to the location of the stations and it is believed the counts this summer will give the department a good idea as to the flow of traffic across and through the state. No effort has been made to select the points of greatest traffic in any county because past traffic counts have given sufficient information so that the points of greatest traffic are well known.

Counts in Outagamie-co this year will be made on Highway 10, near the Waupaca-co line, west of Dale; on Highway 76 between Greenville and W. Greenville station; and on Highway 55, just south of Seymour. Counts will start at 6 o'clock in the morning and continue until 11 o'clock at night.

The dates on which counts will be made are: June 18; July 4, 19 and 27; Aug. 4 and 19; and Sept. 1, 17 and 23.

Talks To Parents

GIVE AWAY

BY ALICE JUDSON PEALE

The children were playing house. "I'm the grandmother," said Billy. "And when the children are naughty I'll spank them."

"All right and I'm the daddy," another voice chimed in, "so you must keep quiet whenever I say so."

"I'm going to be the nurse," said a third voice. "No you can't," the others chorused. "We need a mother so you've got to be the mother." "Oh, it's no fun being mother. Mothers always have headaches. I'd rather be the nurse."

The play went on for a while. The telephone rang. The little girl who was mother answered it. She went through a good deal of social patter in a most lady-like voice. "Oh no, my dear, I couldn't possibly. I'm so sorry but I have a headache this afternoon. Goodbye darling." And she hung up.

"You know," she explained to the rest of the household, "I haven't a headache at all but it was Mrs. Grayson and I just didn't want to go to her house."

Children playing house are a dead give-away on their homes and their parents. Naively and unconsciously they recreate the atmosphere in which they live. The parent who listens in any profit by what he hears.

Hearing your own children live and play the life of their elders as they see it is, I sometimes think, the best way to learn first hand what impressions of personality you are making and to just what values you are educating them.

If you listen sympathetically you cannot fail to get a very good idea of just how well you are doing the job of parenthood.

A Primer for Merchants

Lesson No. 1

WHO is the man? That is Mr. Gadget. What is he doing? He is cleaning up his store to make his customers feel more at home. Will they feel at home? No, Mr. Gadget's customers are not familiar with his goods. His manufacturers have not advertised in his daily newspaper. Would they help him if he asked? Very probably. He deserves their aid.

WHO is this man? This is Mr. Bizzy. What is he doing? Mr. Bizzy is making a better background for his goods. Do customers recognize and want his goods? Yes, they have read about them in his own daily newspaper; he has persuaded his manufacturers to advertise directly to his public through his DAILY LEAGUE NEWSPAPER; people will buy the goods which they have read about.

Mr. Merchant: Here is a simple approach to an important problem — aid from your manufacturers in the form of proportionate advertising placed in your DAILY LEAGUE NEWSPAPER. When manufacturers' representatives call to take your orders, make certain that you are receiving a just amount of advertising support, where everyone will see and read it, in this — your newspaper. This office will give you additional information.

The Pontiac Big Six enjoys a world-wide reputation for dependability—because it is built on big car principles and to big car standards of quality.

Its 60-horsepower motor develops maximum power at moderate engine speeds—is never over-taxed, no matter how fast or far you drive. The big main bearings are of the costly interchangeable airplane type. There is definite protection in the full pressure oiling system and crankcase ventilation which prevents dilution of the engine oil. Efficient cooling is assured by the cross-flow radiator. And Pontiac internal-expanding brakes frequently run 30,000 miles before the lining needs replacement.

You know, when you buy a Pontiac Six, you are buying a dependable car.

Fords Invade Kaukauna Sunday Seeking Revenge

ELECTRIC CITY CLUB WON FIRST GAME LAST WEEK

Beat Kotal-Smith Co., After Appleton Team Had Five Run Lead

Kim-Little Chute	1	4	.200

SUNDAY'S GAMES

Wisconsin Rapids at Green Bay.
Kim-Little Chute at Nee-Menasha.
Appleton at Kaukauna.

EDDIE Kotal and Len Smith, the management of the Appleton club in the Valley league will wander to Kaukauna again Sunday afternoon for their weekly baseball game with deep revenge smoldering in their manly breasts. For they have hopes of evening a score with Kaukauna which originated a little more than a week ago, last Memorial day to be specific, at which time the Kaws beat the Fords after the latter had figured it had the old ball game sewed up with a five run lead in the first two innings.

Just what beat the Fords in that game is a question Boss Kotal has been thinking over in his most serious frame of mind. The most logical conclusion is that the Fords were a bit overcome by their early inning success and when the hurriers eased up and the Kaws coiled first one run then another and a couple more in small doses they soon had enough to cop the battle. That won't happen again Kotal says, for he'll keep driving the gang until the last man is out. Once is enough to learn a lesson.

If the Fords can dump the Kaws Sunday they'll not only even with the Electric City gang but they will have beaten each of the two teams that have defeated them this season—the Rapids and the Kaws. Scores were evened with the Rapids last Sunday when Sakolsky and Eastling were hammered until the home crew won 15 and 14 with a ninth inning rally.

Lefty Ritten is booked for mound duty for the Fords, according to local managers and Lefty is looking forward to the assignment with real interest. He beat the Kaws last season every time he tossed his play and to the pitchers' box and he had start this year sort of rambles on his mind. If the sun comes out to warm up things he'll probably be in rare form, physically and mentally.

Humber who once upon a time worked for the Milwaukee Home Breads back when Lelivelt had charge of the down state association club, will work for Kaukauna. He started on the opening Memorial day and although treated most rudely in the first two innings settled down after the second and allowed the Fords to run a run. The Appleton team had runners on first and third in the ninth inning but Humber stopped them up and carted home a win.

There may be some changes in the Ford batting order again Sunday, at least they ought to be. Last Sunday's game showed that and Smith their strongest batting power is not the one that was used in former games. In other words Dats Crowe, when it's certain he isn't going to pitch, should be used in the outfield so that his war club can be of best use. Crowe batted among the leaders last season and for him to be sitting on the bench when he can also play the garden and hit, isn't exactly sound logic.

Green Bay—The free-for-all in the Fox River Valley league pennant hunt will be resumed on Sunday with another set of three attractive games on the schedule.

A battle for second place will be staged at Kaukauna where the College will have it out with Kaukauna.

Kim-Little Chute invades Nee-Menasha. Several weeks ago the Papermakers tumbled the Pails and Marty Lamers thinks his club is good enough to do it again. Nixon and Handler will be the points for the Pails while Kim-Little Chute plans to start Vanderloop with Hartz receiving.

Dave Zuidmiller, Packer football star is to pitch for the Bays against Wisconsin Rapids. Glick will be on the receiving end. "Specs" Eastling, husky pitcher, who is the property of the Milwaukee Brewers will be up for the visitors while McLean is to wear the big mit and mask.

JACK THOMPSON HANGS K. O. ON BILLY WELLS

Omaha, Neb. —(AP)—When Billy Wells, former British welterweight king, was knocked out here last night in the second round by Young Jack Thompson, negro welterweight champion of the world, it was the first time that Wells had been counted out in more than ten years of boxing.

The wily veteran was sent down for the count by a terrific overhead right that seemed to come out of nowhere. It landed flush and the British scrapper was counted out with seconds to spare.

Up to the time of the knockout Wells, the champion and Wells had seemed an even battle.

The title was not at stake, both men being overweight.

Secrecy Prevails About Camp Of Herr Schmeling

BY EDWARD J. NEIL Associated Press Sports Writer

NDICOTT, N. Y.—(AP)—Not since Gorgeous Georges Carpentier, orchid man of France, hid behind the closed doors of his training camp at Manhasset in 1921 has a man of mystery trailed such a string of doubts and surmises across the heavyweight horizon as Max Schmeling.

Next Thursday night the young Teuton will match his youth and punching power against Jack Sharkey, his skill and experience in a 15 round battle in the Yankee Stadium for the world's heavy weight championship Gene Tunney tossed aside.

Many capable critics believe Max will win the title although he is certain to be an underdog in the wagering. Yet no man in fight history, with the possible exception of Jim Jeffries or Luis Angel Firpo, ever came so far in so short a time or won for himself a challenger's rating on so brief a display of prowess. He has fought five men in two years and has beaten only two good ones.

The air of mystery is so good as deep as the secretive atmosphere that surrounded Carpentier when the slender Frenchman, first European to fight for the title in modern times, worked on Long Island for his slaughter at the hands of Jack Dempsey. The mystery this time is in Young Schmeling himself. In his main American conquests Schmeling knocked out Johnny Risako and Paulino Uzcudun and turned both these stunts without suffering any punishment to speak of.

Another controversy centers about Schmeling's failure to employ the best left hand jabbing sparring partners available. On the contrary he seems to shun training opposition endowed with any resemblance of Sharkey's favorite weapon. The only sparring partner in camp with an astute left hand, a youngster named Stanley Porceda, was released after a few days in which he masaged Schmeling's features with jabs almost without interruption. Charley Belanger, a capable light heavy, weight with a fine left hand and good right cross, similar in style to Sharkey, has arrived in camp to box Schmeling for the first time Saturday.

Strangely enough, Belanger, who has never seen Schmeling, box thinks that Sharkey is certain to whip the German and should knock him out.

After a solid year's lay-off from the ring, Max has boxed just 14 days to prepare for the Sharkey battle. He will work out three more afternoons before hanging up his training gloves until the next fight, around June 10. One knows what he weighs, but the suspicion is general that he is underweight. Too finely drawn, and many of the critics believe that he has not done sufficient work for so important a match.

Yet Max himself is satisfied with the situation, confident that he is in the best physical condition of his career, certain that he will win, but frank to grant the possibility that Sharkey will prove too much for him.

Coach Murphy was obviously feeling low. The cause was not far from following their excellent showing against the University of Pennsylvania, May 24, when they rowed two miles in 10:26.35, the Badgers' mercurial mentor planned to concentrate on developing endurance in his sweep swimmers but daily squalls and heavy seas prevented work on Lake Mendota, the only available water for a course of more than two miles. As a result the varsity crew could not get in a four mile pull until Wednesday, when the results shown were disappointing.

"We were six weeks ahead of last year, at the same date, when we met Penn. Since then we have lost much of that advantage," Coach Murphy explained. However, neither coach nor crew is letting down for a moment and the spirit of the men remains cheerful. Various shifts have been tried in the past ten days but always the coach has gone back to the combination which he has used since the middle of May. This includes Weber, stroke; Zabel, 7; Woodward, 6; Smedal, 5; Marple, 4; Keenan, 3; Oberdick, 2; Perling, bow; Miller, coxswain.

The Badger mentor made a wry face when his attention was called to the fact that Columbia's crew moved up to its training quarters near Foughkeeps Thursday and that Penn would follow suit Saturday. Wisconsin will not wet a shell in the Hudson until June 18—eight days before the race, and, judging from experience of the past three weeks, will be getting in few four-mile trials here before going east. For the next week, final examinations will engage most of their attention.

MRS. PARDEE IN FINALS OF TRANS-MISSISSIPPI MEET

Tulsa, Okla. —(AP)—Experience has beaten back youth's threat in the fourth annual women's trans-Mississippi golf tournament which entered its final stage today over the Tulsa country club course.

Mrs. Dorothy Klotz Pardue of Sioux City, Ia., whose linka career covers a ten year period, and Mrs. Hulbert S. Clarke of Oklahoma City, a newcomer in regional play, but outstanding on Oklahoma courses for seven years, met for the tournament championship.

The final match was expected to be bitterly fought. Mrs. Pardue, recognized as one of the longest women drivers in the United States, will hold little edge over the Oklahoma player in this department of play.

WITH five nice victories and not a defeat to their credit, Appleton Athletics, local entry in the Little Fox baseball league will start the second round of season's play Sunday afternoon at Interlake park with the Menasha Falcons as the opposition. The Fells have won two games and lost three this season.

It's a mighty confident bunch of ball players performing on the Fourth ward team at the present writing and with Joe Brautigan hurling high class baseball and with his teammates hitting the pill with ease, perhaps the boys have reason to be confident.

They have battled through five games so far this year and have been pressed in only one or two. That also helps make them feel that the rest of the schedule is going to be more or less of a romp.

Brautigan will again be on the mound against the Fells when Sunday afternoon rolls around and will have his best footers all primed up his pitching wind. Brauty also has picked up somewhat of a bat reputation since hitting a homer last week, and may come through with another blow or two Sunday.

Other games in the league will find the second place Kaukauna team over at Wrightstown while the luckless Neenah Kimberley-Clark team battles Little Chute at Little Chute.

LEGION JUNIORS WILL PLAY MONDAY

Revised Schedule Is Prepared for Balance of League Season

Two days' rain washed out all baseball games scheduled Friday night in the American legion's junior baseball league, but hostilities will be renewed Monday night—weather permitting.

Because of the withdrawal of the Cubs from the loop, a change in schedule has been announced by Harvey Priebe, directing the activity for the post.

Monday night's games are: Cards vs. Third ward Juniors at Brandt park.

Athletics vs. Brewers at Interlake.
Fifth ward vs. Sixth ward at Wilson. Games which have been postponed because of rain probably will not be played at all because of the lateness of the season. Play in the loop continues another 10 days or so at the end of which the Appleton post's competition started.

A battle of jockeys loomed, with the veteran Earl Sande on Gallant Fox and Sonny Workman on Whichever.

Lawrence beat Ripon college team twice this season and Beloit once. The team then went down to the state tennis meet at Waukesha and placed two men in the semi finals in singles and won the doubles championship. The points gave the Vikes the state intercollegiate title.

Brooklyn Robins Upset National League Dope

BY JOHN B. FOSTER Copyright 1936

NEW YORK—In the National league this year, the apparent has been upset. And the team that has done this trick to the vehicle of the baseball experts is the Brooklyn Robins. Instead of staying where they were placed in the percentage column in the predictions of the prognosticators, they have leaped up like a jumping jack from his box and here they are in first place.

Teams, except Brooklyn, are not so far from what they were a year ago. This has been a season of much ado about batting. In some games there have been high total scores and the managers, who were licked, or their teams, said it was because there was an invasion of a so called lively ball. That doesn't mean much.

The best batting team at this time last season was Philadelphia, and the second best was Chicago. Brooklyn was third and Pittsburgh fourth. The leading team now is St. Louis. Brooklyn is second, Pittsburgh third and Philadelphia fourth. In both years the Giants have been in the second division when June began, yet to hear occasional wails from hard hit quarters one would imagine that the Giants were a great team of sluggers gone wrong.

The surprise of the league in betting is St. Louis which has jumped 48 points over a year ago. This is the secret of their success. If the Cardinals can continue to bat as they have been batting and to hold top

Rice Of Nats Has Hit Safely In 43 Out Of 44 American League Games

Got 28 Consecutive Hits in First Series, and 15 More in Second

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR. Associated Press Sports Writer

THE younger batters of the American league haven't much chance to make names for themselves as long as those two old timers, George Herman Ruth and Edgar Charles Rice continue to hit at their present rates.

The Washington Senators have played 45 games so far; Rice has taken part in 44 of them; and only once has he failed to get at least one hit. Sam connected safely in 28 consecutive games before his streak was broken May 18. He picked up the series again the next day and has continued through 15 more games.

Rice had no chance to continue his batting streak yesterday, nor did his rivals do much hitting as wet grounds caused the postponement of two American league games while the pair that were played produced few hits compared to the totals that have been piled up in some recent games.

Joe Sewell of Cleveland and Russ Scarratt of the Boston Red Sox had perfect days with three and four hits respectively as the Indians gained a 9 to 4 victory over Boston, but neither is in a position to threaten the lead of the Senators.

ATHLETICS DOWN BROWNS The blows of the Philadelphia Athletics and St. Louis Browns were pretty well distributed in the 5 to 4 triumph of the world's champions. The winning pitcher Roy Mahaffey, contributed a home run to his victory, but he had to step down in favor of George Earnshaw as the Browns put on another ninth inning rally.

Denny Southern of the Philadelphia Phillies, batting first of the day to help the Phillies to a 14 to 5 victory over the Cincinnati Reds. In five times at bat, he hit five times and scored five runs. Four of his hits were doubles, equalling an all time major league record.

The New York Giants hit 17 times, ten of the blows being divided between Critz, Leach and Terry, and defeated the St. Louis Cardinals, 10 to 7, to move into a three way tie in games with the Cards and Pittsburgh for third place in the National league. Pittsburgh gained the post by a one point margin, defeating the Boston Braves, 4 to 3.

Chicago's Cubs scored their ninth successive victory at the expense of the Brooklyn Robins and Dazzy Vance, 13 to 0, and cut the Robins' lead from two games to one. Charley Root held Brooklyn to two singles while the Cubs were getting ten hits off Vance in the six innings he lasted, and a half dozen more from his successors.

Reported to be loaded for bear and intent upon dumping the Merchants into defeat, Murphy's Corners baseball team in the Central Wisconsin league will invade Appleton Sunday afternoon to do battle with the Appleton club at Wilson Junior high school diamond. The Merchants are unbeaten in the league to date.

Among the corps supposed to have joined the Corners team in the last couple days is Clarence "Cave" Radtke who used to cavort at first base for the Appleton club in the Fox River valley league. The names of the other additions to the club are unknown.

But the Merchants are not afraid of even "loaded" teams and they are looking forward to hanging up another victory, realizing that just one defeat will send them down into a tie with Readfield and make the league race anyone's.

Because of the interest Sunday's game is stringing up the Merchants are looking forward to a record crowd at Wilson grounds. Their games so far have been well patronized and the team is becoming a regular fixture in the Fifth ward.

The same lineup that carried the Merchants to victories in other games will perform again Sunday with Murphy drawing the hurling assignment. He has had two weeks' rest and should be able to go the route. Laabs will be on deck to help him out should he find the going too tough.

Other league games will find the second place Readfield aggregation over at Shiocton improving its hold on the second place position while Weyauwega goes to New London in an effort to clinch third place.

FANS 19 BATTERS IN EIGHT INNINGS BUT LOSES 5 AND 2

Decatur, Ill. —(AP)—A leading candidate for the title of "most unlucky baseball player" of the season is young Tom Bridges, right-handed pitcher of the Evansville, Ind., Three Eye league club.

In a night game against Decatur last night Bridges, who went to Evansville a year ago from the University of Tennessee, struck out 19 batters in eight innings and lost 5 to 2. Five of the seven hits off Bridges were clustered in the first two innings and his teammates couldn't do enough hitting off Spear of Decatur, to help him out.

The book shows that Frank Shaw of the Boston Union association club, fanned 18 men in nine innings back in 1884—the only figure on the subject.

PLEDGE BIG PART OF $1,000 DEBT ON NEW LONDON CHURCH

$725 Raised so Far, Reports Submitted at Banquet Indicate

New London—At a banquet marked with high enthusiasm private pledges guaranteeing $725 of the $1,000 church debt of the Methodist church were reported. Dr. J. McInnis of Milwaukee, one of the two guest speakers, led the plea for aid in obliterating the debt. He traced the progress of the ages, asserting that God gives men and women power with which to bring about the physical, intellectual and spiritual development of the world, and that He relies upon man to do the rest.

Though God may have the power to develop the world's gifts, the speaker continued, He leaves this portion of progress to human beings. This calls for the closest sort of co-operation, and in the perfection of this cooperation lies the secret of the world's progress, he said.

Dr. McInnis appealed for toleration in religious matters, asserting that there is great need of realizing that if we do not lay aside petty prejudices the progress of God's plans will be greatly retarded.

Dr. Richard Evans of Appleton talked on Learning to Live With One Another. In closing his remarks he complimented the spirit of the evening, saying that never had he witnessed more thorough wholeheartedness.

More than one hundred persons were served at the dinner preceding the addresses. Giles H. Putnam acted as leader in the singing, with E. L. Reuter at the piano. W. H. Hutton was toastmaster, addressing the assembly and introducing the speakers. Dinner was served by members of the Dorcas society.

Grads Of 1890 Attend Rites For Dr. Pemberton, Principal

(Special to Post-Crescent)

Manawa—Almost 40 years ago, on a June night in 1890, three youths, nervous, self-conscious, and perspiring, sat on a platform of the Odd Fellows hall in Seymour, the cynosure of all eyes. The trio represented the first graduating class of the Seymour high school and they were praised and advised by their principal, a man but a few years older than themselves, as he handed them their diplomas.

The principal was Dr. W. E. Pemberton for whom last rites were held from the J. T. Penn residence in Manawa, Tuesday afternoon. The Rev. F. W. Wright, pastor of the Methodist church conducted the services. After the services here the body was taken to Madison for burial, with services at the grave being conducted by the Rev. Henry Hope Lumpkins.

The three students who received their diplomas from the late Dr. Pemberton are Charles R. Prosser, now president of the Seymour State bank; N. J. Stewart, Green Bay, car accountant for the Green Bay and Western railroad company, and A. C. Walch, owner and publisher of the Manawa Advocate, all of whom were present at the services to pay last tribute to the man who had guided them through all of their high school days.

After the eventful night in 1890 the quartet did not meet again until two summers ago when they held a class reunion at the Walch cottage, Kill Kare Kabin on Bear lake.

Dr. Pemberton, well known by many Manawa people died suddenly at Clayton, Ind. last Thursday of a heart attack. He was born in St. George, Ontario, January 20, 1861. His grandfather, Amos Pemberton, went from New York to Ontario after the Revolutionary war in which he had taken active part. Amos Pemberton was a decedent of Governor Winthrop of Plymouth colony.

Coming to Wisconsin when he was seven years old, Dr. W. E. Pemberton graduated from Oshkosh Normal in 1882, and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, Md., in 1893. He taught one year each at Northport and Winchester, and was principal of the Seymour high school for three years, between his graduation at Oshkosh and his student days in Baltimore.

Dr. Pemberton settled at Wittenberg in 1893 and practiced there continually until 1921. Since that time he has owned telephone property at Sauk City and in Indiana. He was married at Wittenberg to Miss Ann Williams on Dec. 25, 1907 and one son, Williams, Jr., was born to them. His widow and son survive him.

RUGGLES AGAIN ON LIKKER TRIAL IN LATEST FILM

Comedian in 'The Lady Lies' Finds Himself Tagged as Rum Guzzler

Upright and law-abiding persons who see and hear Charles Ruggles in his second all-talking picture, "The Lady Lies," showing for the last times at the Appleton theatre and other persons who have seen him act previously may well shake their heads dolefully over Charlie's career in the talkies.

First it was Paramount's "Gentlemen of the Press" in which Charlie was fired from his job because he was an inveterate drunkard. Even after he lost his job Charlie kept right on ploughing into the "laughing soup."

In "The Lady Lies" alas and alack-a-day, Charlie is "drunk again."

Now what about his real life record? Is he sootted and debauched? "Never arrested yet, never picked out of the gutter, always able at least to take off my clothes and climb into 'beddy-bouz' under my own power," says the virtuous Ruggles. "In fact," he adds, "it is a press agent story, say I never drink at all."

But on the legitimate stage he is equally incorrigible. He probably got his first talking picture assignment because he earned the reputation of an old soak in the recent musical show, "Rainbow." Long before that he was coming home drunk in Al Wood's farce, "The Girl in the Limousine."

"It's no fun, this stage drunkenness," says Ruggles. "I'm afraid I'll never get a chance to do a straight part again as long as I live. I'm tagged as an alcoholic. The only way to ease, apparently, is to put on a swell case of delirium tremens."

SIDNEY, MURRAY GREAT IN THEIR LATEST PICTURE

Play Leads in Columbia Rip-roaring Farce at Elite Theatre

Rip-roaring, hilarious comedy comes to the Elite Theatre Monday for an engagement of four days in the form of "Around the Corner," the Columbia all-talking production with George Sidney and Charlie Murray in the leading roles. Patterned along the lines of "McFadden's Flats" and the "Cohen and Kelly" series, it outdoes its predecessors in genuine cowboy gags, novelty of plot and romantic appeal.

Interest revolves about two old cronies, Kaplan and O'Grady. They adopt a foundling, a girl, a girl, grows up, her fosterparents engage in a continuous row about the choice of her husband. Kaplan picks as a future son-in-law, Moe Levine, an insurance agent, while O'Grady sets his heart on Terry Calahan, a prize-fighter. The battle rages until Rosie, the girl, takes matters in her own hands and chooses her own husband.

Before this denouement is reached there are a series of situations which evoke gales of laughter. The story is extremely funny, the dialog is clever, and the acting superb. George Sidney and Charlie Murray as a team stand out at the head of the fun-making class. The love interest is pleasantly and capably handled by Joan Peters and Larry Kent. Joan Peters continues giving evidence of the talent which she demonstrated in "Applause," her first film. Two clever characterizations are contributed by Charles Delaney and Jess DeVorska as Rosie's rejected suitors. Bert Glennon has given the picture capable direction.

Some people drive as though they own the road when they don't even own the car.

LILLIAN GISH IN TALKING PICTURES

Showing at The Mid-night Show and Sunday Only

"One Romantic Night" the immortal stage classic by Ferenc Molnar which Lillian Gish is translating into the first dialogue picture of her career at the Fox Theatre. Is the story of a young commoner who dares to challenge an aristocrat for the love of a maiden of means.

The romantic love triangle of "One Romantic Night" which many connoisseurs of the theatre declare will live as long as "Camille's" deathless love, is a fertile plot which only the imagination of a Molnar at his best could create.

Unlike "Camille," which is a distinct tragedy, Miss Gish's starring vehicle is a comedy-drama, the love interest of which is emphasized by contrasting it with a sophisticated and humorous counterplot.

The work is Miss Gish's first serious work in some time and brings the charming screen heroine of "The Birth of a Nation," "Way Down East" and "Broken Blossoms" back in a United Artists' picture worthy of her talents.

As "Alexandra," the maiden who is forced to choose between a poor tutor and an aristocrat upon whom she is fostered by her father, the star is seen and heard in the first worldly-wise role since she became associated with David Wark Griffith.

BROADWAY'S PRIZE SONGSTER IN FILM

Harry Richman Lends Voice to Sound Screen as Star of "Puttin' on the Ritz"

In prominence of cast, and the authentic atmosphere of Broadway, "Puttin' on the Ritz," the United Artists' all-dialogue musical spectacle starring Harry Richman, coming to the Fox Theatre, 3 days, starting Monday promises to be the foremost offering in the record of talking, singing pictures.

The presence in the cast of Richman alone is sufficient to assure plenty of entertainment, for Richman has been one of New York's greatest attractions in musical comedy and night clubs for several years.

Second only to Richman and Joan Bennett, leading lady, is James Gleason, an outstanding figure in the theatre business, who does everything there is to do about the theatre except take tickets. He is the author of "Is Zat So?" and "The Shannons of Broadway." In addition to writing these plays, he starred in them as well. He writes original screen stories and dialogue, act in pictures and does odd jobs of directing on the side.

Purnell Pratt and Eddie Kane, also prominent in the cast, are favorites of the stage and consequently old hands at the business of entertainment.

Miss Bennett, who played on the stage in "Jamegan" with her distinguished father, Richard Bennett, plays the lead opposite Richman. It is her fifth consecutive talking picture, and in all of them she has scored outstanding successes.

Aileen Pringle and Lilian Tashman, two of Hollywood's outstanding personalities, play prominent roles in the picture, and demonstrate that the western show center can hold its own with Broadway in providing entertainers.

"Puttin' on the Ritz," the story of which almost parallels Richman's actual career as vaudeville performer, musical comedy star and night club king, was written by John W. Considine, Jr., and dialogued by William K. Wells.

Ace Comedians

Charlie Murray and George Sidney a funniest team on the screen are it again, and this time in the lumbia all-talking laugh riot around the corner at the Elite Theatre, four days starting Monday. Here in the cast are Joan Peers, Larry Kent and Charlie Delaney.

Meet "Tondeleyo"

A scene from "White Cargo" which can be seen at the Appleton Theatre at the midnight preview tonight also Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. Due to the nature of this intense tropical drama, children will not be admitted at any time. Most everyone is familiar with this great story and now you have the wonderful opportunity of witnessing this greatest of all talking drama of the tropics.

Ramon Novarro Waited For Sound Perfection

Star in "Gay Madrid" Had Little Faith in Early Experiments

Ramon Novarro, one of the last of the established silent picture stars to face the microphone, purposely held off because of lack of faith in the new contrivance. Novarro, who will soon be seen in his second all-talking and singing picture, "In Gay Madrid," recently admitted that when talkies first came out, he thought that they were so much clap-trap and destined for only a brief existence.

Since his overwhelming success in both the talking and singing field the young star has perforce looked at the sound medium from a new viewpoint.

"I am told by critics that the microphone has been kind to me," he stated. "It is very gratifying for me to know that I am acceptable in talking pictures, especially since it affords me an opportunity to use professionally my greatest pleasure and hobby, singing. It makes work more pleasure and less toil."

This Ramon Novarro attraction is showing at the Fox Theatre today only.

Murder at High Tide

Chapter 24
CELIA AND GRAINGER
S AMUELS took it very well. "I'm sorry, Mrs. Parados. We'll do our best to get to the bottom of this. Grainger was shot by the one who killed your husband, of course."
"Because he knew too much," Mrs. Parados said positively. "You weren't able to get much out of him, I suppose?"
"No," Samuels admitted. "He wouldn't tell what he knew."
"That was like Grainger," she muttered.
An awkward silence followed. Samuels brought his eyes to rest on Celine.
"What are you doing out there, Miss Brent?"
"I heard the shot and I came down."
Caroline's face whitened.
"Where were you when you heard it?"
"Upstairs. I'd just stepped onto the roof. It was nearer to come down the outside stair."
"You always are alone at the wrong moment, aren't you, Miss Brent?" Samuels inquired ironically.
A protest strange to my lips, but Flique intervened. "What is this?" he whispered. He was on his knees beside the body, going through the pockets of Grainger's garments. A knife, keys, a pipe, some money and matches were spread out on a handkerchief. As he bent over his shoulder he was fingering a piece of twisted steel shaving--some two inches long and possibly a seventh of an inch wide. The shaving had been wrapped in a scrap of newspaper.
"What is it?" Samuels asked, as he took the bit of steel.
"But a shaving of steel, Monsieur," Flique replied. "I found it in a pocket."
"Anything else?" Samuels wanted to know.
"Would you expect the assassin to leave his card?" Flique inquired mildly.
Samuels, at this, included Caroline, Miss Jahries, Manning, and Mrs. Parados in a sentence or two of dismissal. I went as far as the door with Caroline.
"Have you any idea why Grainger took the trouble to put it away in his pocket?" Samuels was saying as I returned.
"Perhaps it told him who killed monsieur, his master," Flique answered.
"Does it tell you that?"
Flique twirled his mustache. "Monsieur," he said impressively, "I am generous. It is the living tissue, that trifle of steel. You will treasure it, I imagine."
"What's on your mind, Flique?" "Non, non," the little man cried, wagging his head. "The pot--it is not yet cooked."
"The shot was fired inside this room," Samuels continued moodily. "That is certain this time. We smelled powder and found the empty shell."
"Also," Flique reminded him significantly, "that telephone is upset, the patio window is wide open, and Grainger dies in front of the fire he has just lighted."
"I don't get your idea at all," Samuels said irritably. "There may have been a struggle. If there was, the telephone could have been upset."
"If there had been a combat would Grainger have continued to hold the match, I ask you? Would it not have been heard by Manning and Miss Jahries?"
He ran nimbly to the patio window and we followed him.
"You see?" he inquired.
"The killer may have flung them back as he made his getaway," Samuels insisted.
"The window was closed when you found Parados, wasn't it?" Samuels demanded impatiently.
"Yes, monsieur, it was closed."
"I suppose you'll admit the field is narrower?" Samuels said. "Lum We, Grainger and Johns are out. So are Miss Jahries and Manning. It is of all this that you are thinking?" Flique inquired again.
"Perhaps we shall break a few yet," "Grainger's?" Samuels asked ironically.
"Monsieur is pleased to jest," Flique answered amiably. "Hello, who is this?"
Hendricks appeared at the patio window, Kirk and Gridly behind him.
"I'm sorry about this, sir," he said huskily. "Grainger and Professor Johns were about the only two human beings on this damned island."
"Where was he?" Samuels asked.
"In the bathroom cooking his supper," Kirk said.
"How long had you been there, Hendricks?"
"All afternoon, sir."
"I guess he was down there when Grainger was bumped off," Kirk continued. "I went down as soon as I'd seen Lum We was O. K. If he had been up here I wasn't five minutes behind him. But he hadn't. Why? Because he was frying himself a juicy tenderloin and it was about done as I butted in."
"You didn't hear the shot, Hendricks?"
"No, sir. When the tide is high you can't hear anything."
"I suppose not. See any one else, Kirk?"
"Lum We, that's all. The place stunk of incense. Somebody must have shoved it under the door."
Samuels nodded. "See if you can find Annersley and the Ferris girl." Professor Johns entered at that moment from the hall. His brown eyes passed inquiringly around and then came to rest on the figure on the hearth. He took off his glasses and a film of horror crept slowly over his colorless face.
As Samuels explained what had happened, Johns nodded.
"Grainger was a good man," he said presently. "I would have given everything I own to have prevented this. We were friends."
"You saw much of him, M. le Professeur?" Flique inquired.
"Quite a little, M. Flique," Professor Johns replaced his glasses. "He was a lonely man, like myself. It was the only person on the island who could talk to me about my work. Have you any idea who did it?"
Samuels shook his head. "Had you been in the fort some time when I telephoned you?"
"Several hours. I had been writing."
Annersley came into the room, his distended eyes fixed on the body.
"This is dreadful! Celia, Celia!" he groaned, bending over the body. And then, "Who did this?"
Samuels told him what he knew. "Where have you been during the last half hour?"
"Walking along the cliffs," he replied.
"Where was Miss Ferris?"
"I was with her up to an hour ago."
"Well, where did she go then?"
"I don't know."
"You do know!" Samuels shouted. "You've been holding out on me from the first. Where is that girl? Come clean with the whole thing!"
Celia suddenly appeared at the hall door.
"Mrs. Parados said you wanted me--" Celia stopped at her eyes fell on Grainger's body.
"I shall never forget the look in her face. It was another of those piercingly vivid pictures I was to carry away from that house of horror."
"Father--father--what have they done--?"
She fell insensible across Grainger's body.
That puzzling look on Grainger's eyes should have enlightened me, but it hadn't. The rose incident was clear now; so was the significance of the slash across Grainger's cheek. Flique was the only one of us who had divined the truth.
Annersley lifted Celia clear of the body.
"Why did we let him go on with it?" he muttered in an anguished voice. "Celia, open your eyes. Speak to me, dear! Look at me!"
"You knew about this?" Samuels asked Flique.
"The eyes of Grainger, M. le Professeur," Flique answered sadly. "It is another of the little mysteries."
Celia opened her eyes and looked around in bewilderment, then flung herself sobbing upon her father. Annersley placed himself at her side and I turned with Flique and Samuels to the west window.
Samuels decently gave them ten minutes.

STOCK MARKET GIVES WAY AS BIG VOLUMES OF ISSUES ARE SOLD

Wide Variety of Leading Issues Drop from Two to Seven Points

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor

New York.—(AP)—The stock market finally gave way with the rush today to the persistent bear pounding to which it has been intermittently subjected for several days. Stocks were dumped upon the market in huge volume, and trading reached the swiftest pace experienced since early May. A wide assortment of leading issues declined 2 to 7 points, with some of the more volatile stocks recording more spectacular losses.

One of the most unsettling developments was the announcement that the stock exchange had granted permission to Radio Corp. of America to omit its quarterly earnings statement, in view of the difficulties presented by capital changes. Radio's earnings have been the subject of considerable bearish conjecture, as prices were drastically reduced during the early months of the year to clear away unsold holiday inventories. It is stated that the present inventory position is satisfactory.

Wall Street was flooded with bearish rumors, as usual during slow declining markets. One report that a large electrical manufacturer was planning to lay off a large number of its employees was emphatically denied. Electrical World reported that equipment business was fair, "although the situation as a whole lacks vigor and snap." A small reduction in steel scrap prices at Chicago, after the recent increase at Pittsburgh, was somewhat disappointing to persons looking for a hardening of iron and steel. Trade reports from the Youngstown area stated that steel mill operations will undergo no further curtailment next week.

Selling was undoubtedly swelled by liquidation of marginal accounts impaired by the rather abrupt drop late yesterday. Forced liquidation, however, was said in brokerage circles to be light, and such selling as was not of professional bearish nature was largely of a discouraged sort. With business entering its summer lull, and efforts to resume the upward movement in stocks here, the market was not without a certain term holders of stocks saw little reason to retain their shares.

Totals sales for the two-hour session approximated 2,250,000 shares, more than total sales for several recent five-hour sessions. The closing tone was weak.

Several issues were depressed to new lows for the year, in which U. S. Steel was conspicuous. Steel sold off nearly 3 points, touching a new 1929 minimum.

Such issues as Radio, Radio Keith, American Can, Johns Manville, Fox, United Aircraft, and Standard Gas, lost 3 points or more. Shares declining 4 to 7 or more, included Allied Chemical, Westinghouse Electric, Air Reduction, Vanadium, Houston Oil, and A. M. Byers. Losses of around 10 points were recorded by Case, Auburn and Worthington.

HOG MARKET TAPERS OFF WITH FEW SALES

Most of Saturday Supply Made Up of Weekend Holdovers

Chicago.—(AP)—Hogs tapered off the week with a small market, even for a Saturday, and closed steadily with the decline of the day before. Most of the supply today was made up of holdovers with a bare 1,000 of the fresh run of 10,000 on sale, the rest going to packers. Bidding on light hogs stopped at $10.40, although there were a few bid higher, and 250-lb. hogs were bid at $10.10. Prices for the week have been consistently higher than last week until the close of yesterday. The top today of $10.40 compares to $10.50 last weekend unfavorably, but the bulk of hogs, both light and heavy, this week have sold before the decline set in.

A few cattle were nominally on sale today, but the market was on an indoor affair, with no active interest in the stock and steers, and presenting to the market a few light yearlings, long yearlings and stock, although light yearlings and heifers and fat cows were off only 25c. Killing quality was medium to good all week, but there was little response from the buying interests. The extreme-top for steers was $14.00, paid early, and for yearlings was $13.40. The bulk ranged from $10.25 to $12.00, however.

Plain lambs had a terrific poundage this week and closed with the lowest losses of the season ranging from $2.00 to $2.50. After selling at $10.50 these kinds dropped to $8.00-8.50, where they now stand. Good grades were not so hard hit, but did lose 50c in dropping from better than $13.00 to $12.50-12.75.

WHEAT PRICES DOWN AS HEAVY SELLING HITS STOCK MARKET

No Export Demand, and Holidays Abroad Causes Instability

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN
Associated Press Market Editor

Chicago.—(AP)—Staggered by stock market breaks, wheat prices toppled heavily over today, and at no time displayed much power to recover. Contributing to the instability of wheat was the fact that no export demand of any consequence was heard from, holidays abroad causing a halt. Furthermore, the outlook appeared to be for only a moderate reduction of the United States wheat visible supply total on Monday.

Joits to confidence on the part of friends of high for wheat came quickly today from New York. The patches telling of securities breaking to new low-record quotations for the year. Action of the stock market served to focus the attention of wheat traders on bears factors, and to minimize the effect of influences that normally would lift the grain market, notably persistent lack of rain northwest. Under such circumstances, buying support for wheat was decidedly scant at times.

In some quarters, nevertheless, much significance was attached to a comprehensive crop report from Canada indicating that despite 1930 early seeding the growth of Canadian wheat is now no further advanced than it was a year ago. This showing, the report said, is due to cold weather, severe frosts and absence of subsoil moisture, all of which are conspiring to prevent normal crop development. It was also pointed out that the Canadian weekend forecast pointed to fair weather, and gave reason for increasing alarm over the Canadian crop.

BANKERS, TRUSTS MUST COOPERATE, BABSON BELIEVES

Otherwise Over Issuance of Securities Is Apt to Result

Babson Park, Mass.—We prosper only as we serve! That truth is just as fundamental in the financial world as it is in the business world. If our investment bankers, investment trusts, and banking syndicates would best serve the public interest, as well as protect their own interests, they must co-operate to prevent the recurrent over-production and inflation of securities. They must gauge the legitimate buying power of American investors much more accurately than they did last Summer, for example. Never before in history have we seen such a flood of new security issues as we had just prior to the stock market collapse last Fall. In the two months of September and October, 1929, $1,612,000,000 new stock and bond issues were floated. The investing public could not absorb them. At least $1,000,000,000 of this amount had to be carried on brokers' loans because they could not be distributed. With credit already strained to the breaking point, brokers' loans already at record levels, and prices dangerously inflated, this foolish flooding of the market with new issues was the final straw that precipitated the greatest stock market crash in history. Investors, investment trusts, bankers, syndicates, and business, all suffered great losses. While an adjustment in stock values was bound to come anyway, the violence of the break would have been greatly lessened were it not for the large quantities of undigested new securities bearing down upon the market.

As we look upon the financial history of the past year it is clear what ought to have been done. The brakes should have been applied to now securities flotations long before the crash.

Indeed, in the first three months of last year $2,800,000,000 securities were issued and rights were offered calling for another $1,500,000,000. As Mr. Fred L. Kent of the American Bankers Association points out, there were $4,000,000,000 of securities that had to be taken by investors in three months' time. It simply could not be done. Our national income would not permit it. Hence, the resort to inflation of bank credit to carry these securities. The Federal Reserve authorities issued warnings, which were promptly disregarded. Investment bankers and investment trusts themselves were led astray by delusions of grandeur. If they thought about it at all they assumed that the country was so wealthy that there was no limit to its buying power for securities. They lacked guide posts based on statistical study of the supply and the legitimate demand for securities.

Following the stock market decline there was an abrupt halting of new security issues. The market was no longer favorable to stock flotations. This, however, was like locking the barn door after the horse was stolen! What is needed is some permanent commission or association which will keep our financial leaders posted on the real condition of the money market at all times. The law of supply and demand applies to stocks and bonds just as it does to commodities. You cannot over-supply the investment market without disaster to prices any more than you can over-supply coal, cement, steel, lumber, or anything else, with out similar disaster.

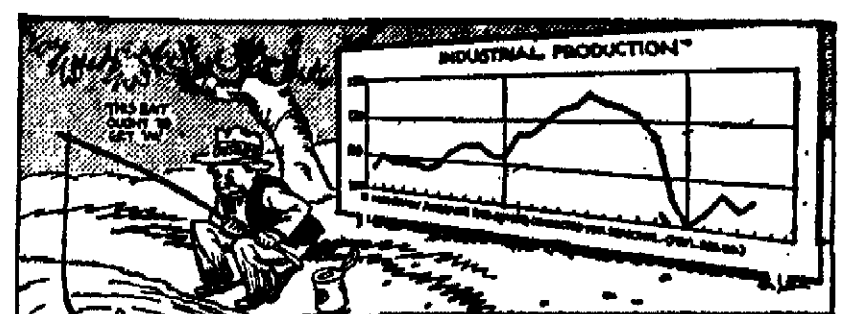

MOVEMENT UNDERWAY
 A movement is now being started by the American Bankers Association to study this question. It deserves the hearty support and co-operation of every banker, banking syndicate, investment trust, broker, and other financial institution in the country. We boast of our conscious control of industry.

Through trade associations keeping members in touch with the condition of supply and demand for practically all basic commodities, we have fostered organized business research on an extensive scale. All this work, however, will go for nothing as far as lessening business depression is concerned, unless similar organization and research is made in the financial field.

The time is past when each individual clique of investment bankers can operate independently of the general group. Last Summer they were each rushing to form new investment trust and issue securities before someone else. Holding companies, many of them grossly inflated, appeared thick and fast. There was a mad scramble for the investor's dollar with no guiding organization to show the promoters the folly of their ways, and point out to them that they would not only hurt themselves and their investors, but they would also bring about a financial cataclysm, the effects of which we have witnessed on business during the past six months.

TRUSTS SHOULD ORGANIZE
 The time has come when the investment trusts of the better sort should get together and form a national organization for research and guidance. The investment trusts suffered a great loss in public esteem as a result of last Fall's happenings. Nevertheless, the trusts are here and they will remain. The basic idea is sound even though the practical conduct of a number of them has been unwarranted. Moreover, the trusts are a vital factor to be reckoned with in finance. They hold $3,000,000,000 of the investment funds of this country. There are more than 600 of them. There are good ones and bad ones.

Trade Recession Is Not Due For Very Long Life

BY ALLARD SMITH
 Vice President, The Union Trust Company, Cleveland
 The American mass mind is subject to moods which fluctuate over a wide area. In good times business sentiment is likely to swing up to a rather ridiculous pitch of unguarded optimism. Conversely when times are bad, pessimism is carried to extremes.

A year ago when trade and industry were making new high records and the speculative fever was rampant, men were talking in all seriousness about the "new era." The opinion widely prevailed that nothing could prevent the indefinite expansion of activities and rise of security prices. Then came the most devastating stock market collapse in history.

Optimism is frequently most pronounced, especially in the security markets, just before the crash comes. Similarly pessimism is usually most unanimous just at the moment that improvement in conditions is near at hand. Nothing is so characteristic of an American trade recession as the general belief that the country is in for a prolonged period, perhaps years, of poor business. Something like this feeling exists in some quarters now.

Actually during the present century periods of receding business have never lasted more than about one year. Moreover, from the point on the calendar when business falls as low as it did last December, genuine recovery in the past usually has gotten under way in from four to eight months.

There was some evidence that the turn appeared in April, but further weakness appeared in some important lines in May, indicating that real recovery may not appear until later in the year. The federal reserve board index of industrial production stood at 106 in April against 104 in March and 122 one year ago.

Factors at work to bring improvement include an ample supply of easy money, low commodity prices, some improvement in construction, and prospects of some gains for retail trade, as employment improves.

STEADINESS SEEN IN CONDITION OF BUSINESS IN U. S.

No Gain Apparent After Holidays But Look for Swing Upward

BY J. C. ROYLE
 Copyright, 1930, by Cons. Press
 Washington - (CPA) - Industry eased back into its stride this week, after the Decoration day holiday, with the utmost smoothness, but without the semblance of a spurt to make up the ground which had been lost. There is, however, an underlying steadiness apparent in the basic industries that is most gratifying to business men, financiers and economists.

The most encouraging sign observable is the volume of retail trade. This is maintaining a total well above the records established in early June, 1929. Retail trade is the final indicator of business, for it represents the passage of goods into the hands of ultimate consumers. This entails the buying of goods by retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers and the shipment of goods to the profit of the transportation companies. There is no question but that inventories are being steadily depleted. This means that purchasing of replacements is bound to be in order within a short time.

STEEL HOLDS

Steel production is not being pushed to higher levels, but it is being evenly well sustained in most lines. In fact, so strong has been the demand that there has been a distinct priming of price, although increases in quotations have been merely of minor character. The improvement in demand from the automobile industry has been a factor.

do not care to be associated with them. Still this should be no barrier to grouping the honest, capable, and progressive institutions into a national association.

They should draw up a strict code of ethics and practices. If they do not do so they face Government regulation of a stringent nature, and, what is worse, a growing animosity on the part of the public to the whole investment trust idea. It is time for the trusts to clean house, to weed out the black sheep, and to force the adoption of an iron-clad ethical code administered by a national organization. Policies must be in accord with the public interest and the general economic and financial welfare.

EACH SHOULD CONTRIBUTE
 Having organized the legitimate investment trusts into a national association, then let that association join forces with the Investment Bankers Association, the American Bankers Association, and the New York Stock Exchange to establish a permanent research bureau to constantly study money conditions, the condition of supply and demand for securities, the need or lack of need for further capital expansion of particular industries, the relation of national income to security offerings, and similar vital questions. This should act as an advisory board to prevent, insofar as possible, such catastrophes as occurred in the financial markets last Summer. Finance is not! We have learned, for example, how to control oil production and conserve our oil resources. We have research bureaus helping to guide the conduct of merchandizing. Our manufacturers are in constant touch with data on production, stocks, shipments, and markets in their industries. The time has come when our financial leaders must discard any ideas of selfish isolation and co-operate with one another for the general good.

NOTARAS BROTHERS PREPARE SPECIAL MENUS FOR SUMMER

Arrange New Variety of Special Dishes Designed for Business People

With the arrival of hot summer weather, Notaras brothers, proprietors of the New Grill restaurant, W. College-ave, have prepared special menus which are meeting with the approval of many business men who eat their lunches in a hurry.

The quick service there is unequalled. Only home-cooked meals are served, and light lunches are mighty tasty.

Every kind of food is found on the menus to please the heavy as well as the light eaters. Special arrangements have been made whereby lunches can be prepared ahead of time to be taken out. This feature of service has met with approval and is endorsed by many local business women, who must use that kind of service to cope with their office hours.

The restaurant features one of the largest varieties of sandwiches. Notaras brothers have long boasted of their complete line of special foods.

For further information regarding the quick service and tasty foods served by Notaras brothers try a noon-day lunch, and you will be convinced that it is of the best.

So also has been the buying of pipe and tubular goods incident to gas line construction. Metal used in road construction also is in active demand, while the developments of power companies and utilities are being maintained at a pace which assures a definite amount of business to the steel companies.

On the other hand, residential building is extremely low and steel men are watching with the utmost care the trend of public works construction to determine just how long its pace will be maintained. The recent ocean mail contracts, which have been signed, have brought a demand for a large amount of steel for ship construction in the form of plates and shapes.

Automobile activities are speeding up, and in an entirely heavy manner. Foreign trade is not at a satisfactory level and probably will not be until the tariff bill is definitely out of the way.

MARKET SUFFERS FROM TOO MANY NEW BOND ISSUES

570 Million in New Offerings Was Total During Last Month

BY CHARLES F. SPEARE
 (Copyright 1930, by Cons. Press)
 New York - (CPA) - As the figures of May bond offerings, now available, are analyzed with respect to the totals of other years, it is evident that one of the conditions from which the investment market is suffering is that of an oversupply of new issues.

Last month the output of new corporate bonds and notes was approximately $570,000,000. While this was not quite up to the figure in April or in March, it compared with slightly over $500,000,000 in May last year and with around $550,000,000 in the same month of 1929.

It brought the offerings for the first five months of 1930 close to $2,700,000,000, which is $1,138,000,000 or 80 per cent, more than in the same period of 1929. It was within 7 per cent of the huge total of the winter and spring months of 1928, when money was cheap and American corporations, as well as foreign borrowers, were taking advantage of this situation to issue a large number of low coupon bonds, either to provide new capital or to refund their obligations carried at a considerably higher rate of interest.

LITTLE REFUNDING

In this year's financing, there has been comparatively little refunding. In the first four months of 1930, the retirement of old issues for new ones represented only 6 per cent of the total financing accomplished. In the same period of 1929, refunding was 12 per cent of all new issues, and in 1928, over 20 per cent. The ratio of new bonds and stocks both for domestic and foreign borrowers employed for refunding purposes has been the lowest this year since 1925.

Just how much of this huge total of new bond offerings in the five months is still in the hands of the syndicate and dealers, it is difficult to determine. Estimates run from 15 to 20 per cent. It is understood for instance, that of the $600,000,000 of municipal and Canadian loans that have been offered since the first of the year, about $100,000,000 are still unsold. Railroad loans have amounted to about $475,000,000. While the original price on them has not been held in all cases, in fact it has dropped off sharply with the closing of syndicates, most of these issues have been of an institutional character and have been well placed so that at present there is not any considerable amount of them overhanging the market.

The largest total of bonds still on the shelves of the dealers are those offered by the public utilities and industrial and by foreign borrowers. Of the sum of $775,000,000 of public utility issues to June 1, there are a considerable number representing small independent power and light companies, mostly of the holding concern type. These have not been well distributed. It is understood that as much as 50 per cent of some of these issues are still in original hands. The same is true of a number of the industrial loans. Of one prominent industrial note issue amounting to $55,000,000, the latest report from the underwriters indicated that they still held over $20,000,000.

Then there are half a dozen sizeable South American and other foreign issues, in which there will have to be secondary selling campaigns in order to place them permanently with ultimate consumers. None of these issues has held its original market. Nearly all can be purchased today at concessions from list prices.

From the standpoint of working up interest in the loan, the delay in bringing out the repayments bonds is unfortunate. It serves however, to withhold from the market another large volume of domestic and foreign issues which have been postponed in order that the new foreign bonds may have the right of way in the investment field.

It is felt that if new financing could be reduced to a minimum for another six weeks, a good sized portion of the present visible supply of loans brought out since Jan. 1 could be absorbed and the improved technical situation would make for a more normal response to easy money conditions than has so far been exhibited.

PROGRESS IS MADE BY TEST SCHOOL, MEIKLEJOHN SAYS

Chairman of College Also Denies Charges of Excessive Cost

Madison - (AP) - Dr. Alexander Meiklejohn, chairman announced Friday that "definite progress" was made in the course of study during the third year of the Experimental college at the University of Wisconsin in his annual report to the faculty.

the college studies the Athens of Pericles and Plato in the freshman year, and nineteenth century America during the sophomore year. The literature of those two periods interpreted to see how "human appreciation and intelligence attempt to express and to direct human action and how both of them succeeded and fail in their characteristic activities," he reported.

After three years, he believes the freshman course of study is "well usable for teaching purposes," but adds that the course on America is more difficult.

"To us who are in the midst of it, American life seems far more complicated and incoherent than that of ancient Athens," Dr. Meiklejohn reported, "but we seem to be finding our way."

The Experimental college was introduced to laboratory work in physics last fall, and its chairman reported today that the work is "very promising."

PLAN NEW COURSES

Prof. Meiklejohn said plans are under way for introduction of courses in biology and anthropology "as a basis for the studies in human activities."

Added to the year studies of civilizations, students in the college make surveys of the communities in which they live. These, Dr. Meiklejohn said, were proving successful.

Commenting on the tutorial system of teaching used in the Experimental college, Prof. Meiklejohn said:

"The dominating purpose is throughout to increase the student's individual power to use books for the development of his own intelligence. Most characteristic of the tutorial system is the personal relationship between the teacher and pupil."

"We are becoming more and more strongly convinced of the value and necessity of this kind of teaching," Dr. Meiklejohn pointed out that the cost of teaching per Experimental college student is $208 a year, while the general university average is $159. He cited average costs in other institutions, which run from $194 to $498 a year.

"These figures indicate how inaccurate are the statements which speak of our costs as far above the general level of the country," he said.

"In our opinion there is no basis whatever for the assertion commonly made that our tutorial method is necessarily more expensive than that which is now in general use."

Any reference to the statement that the Experimental college is to go out of existence are erroneous, according to Prof. Meiklejohn who said its faculty holds that the project still is in its preliminary stage.

"The question of how to give greater vitality and significance to the teaching of freshman and sophomore in the colleges of liberal arts will for a long time demand consideration here at Wisconsin and in all other liberal institutions of the country," he asserted.

Brazil nuts, or "nigger toes," grow on trees sometimes 150 feet high. The nuts grow inside a hard-shelled fruit and are but the seeds. There are about 20 of them in each shell and they are closely packed.
